SLOWLY BUT SURELY

President Garfield is Sinking Day by Day.

He Has Not Recovered From Yesterday's Prostration, as Expected.

At Noon His Pulse Was 114, Temperature 98, Respiration 18.

Official Bulletins From the White House —Latest News of the President's Condition.

7:45 A. M.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, August 16, 7:45 A. M.—The only information which can be obtained from the physicians this morning bearing upon the President's condition is that there has been some improvement during the night. The pulse is reported this morning not only less frequent but more firm.

8:30 A. M.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, August 16.—The President was somewhat restless and vomited several times during the early part of the night. Since 3 o'clock this morning he has not vomited and has slept tranquilly most of the time. Nutritious enemata are successfully employed to sustain him. Altogether his symptoms appear less urgent than yesterday afternoon. At present his pulse is 110, temperature 98.6, respiration 18.

UNOFFICIAL BULLETIN, 11:15 A. M.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, August 16.—Private Secretary Brown came from the surgeon's room a few moments ago and reported the President was then sleeping. No morphia has yet been injected, and there has been no report of nausea since 3 a. m. Two enemata have been successfully administered since midnight. Secretary Brown says the morning dressing showed the wound was in a perfectly healthy condition. Members of the Cabinet arrived at various times during the early morning. Attorney-General MacVeagh accompanied Dr. Agnew, arriving at the Mansion about half past seven. When he returned from the private part of the house he expressed the opinion that, while there was yet hope, the patient was certainly in a very critical condition. There is noticeable a despondent expression visible on the faces of those having access to the President's chamber, and the greatest reticence is observed, especially by the attending surgeons, who do not enter the business portion of the house unless absolutely necessary. The despondent expression of Attorney-General MacVeagh was especially noticeable. Shortly after 9 o'clock the Cabinet officers, with the exception of Secretary Lincoln, who arrived at a later hour, having just returned from New York, left the White House for their respective departments. The day bids fair to be one of anxious waiting. The midday bulletin is anxiously awaited.

The opinion prevails at the Mansion among those who are thoroughly conversant with the President's condition that, should the temperature after the noon dressing be below normal point and the pulse become more frequent, the gravity of the situation will be increased. If on the other hand the temperature should remain normal or decrease a little and the pulse keep up the situation will not be considered as materially changed. Stationary temperature and an improved pulse would be the most favorable indication. At the present time nothing directly from the sick-room has been received since the facts above stated. There is a general feeling of anxiety throughout the city. As usual there are many rumors on the streets, such as: "The pulse is increasing rapidly," "It is known that the President can not recover," etc., etc. There is no foundation for them beyond what has been sent.

UNOFFICIAL BULLETIN, 12:15 P. M.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, August 16.—Dr. Bliss entered the Executive Mansion a few moments ago to attend the noon examination. On being approached by a representative of the Associated Press he said in a general way he considered the patient better than yesterday, whereupon the following dialogue ensued:

Reporter—Well, Doctor, what are the real chances?

Dr. Bliss—The chances are indefinite. I have not seen the patient for an hour or so, but he was better than yesterday when I last saw him, and of course we take encouragement from that.

Rep.—The midday examination will be very important, will it not?

Dr. B.—Oh, yes; for instance if the temperature should fall much below normal the case would look quite badly, particularly so if the pulse should rise.

Rep.—Do you expect this?

Dr. B.—No, we do not; but, of course, we cannot predict with any degree of certainty what will be the result.

Rep.—You do not give the case up then?

Dr. B., emphatically—No, no. We do not give it up.

Rep.—Have any intimations been given the family to prepare for the worst?

Dr. B.—No, sir, it hasn't come to that.

The doctor then proceeded to the sick-chamber, appearing perfectly calm and composed.

12:30 P. M.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, 12:30 P. M., August 15.—The President has been tranquil, and has not vomited since the morning bulletin, but he has not yet rallied from the prostration of yesterday afternoon as much as was hoped. The enemata administered are, however, still retained. At present his pulse is 114, temperature 98.3, respiration 18.

A Day of Suspense.

NEW YORK, August 16.—A special to the Evening Post says: Washington, August 16, 7:30 a. m.—The President still lives and hopes are cherished that he will yet recover. The trouble is entirely with the stomach. If its powers are not gone recovery is yet possible. The President passed a comfortable night, except that he was troubled by retching. About 3 o'clock this morning he slept well and without the aid of morphia. Dr. Ellis Bliss says the physicians have been troubled by his stomach from the beginning and have from the first treated it with great care. If it can have a rest now by the administration of nourishment by injections it may possibly be able to resume its functions before exhaustion gets too great to be overcome. To-day will probably be a day of suspense rather than of incident. The President is disposed to sleep, and nothing will be done unnecessarily to disturb him.

A Decline in Stocks.

NEW YORK, August 16, 11 A. M.—The alarming news regarding the President's condition cast a gloom over Wall street which was reflected in the heavy tone of the stock market. Speculation opened weak, and under very pronounced pressure to sell, the entire list recorded a sharp decline, ranging from ¼ to 3¼, Texas Pacific, Louisville & Nashville, Canada Southern, Kansas & Texas, Hannibal & St. Joe, Reading Union Pacific, Wabash & Pacific and Nashville & Chattanooga leading downward movement.

Premature.

LIVERPOOL, August 16.—The Daily Post and Daily Courier, of this city, announce this morning the death of President Garfield, and publish obituary notices.

Deadly Nitro-Glycerine.

DENVER, August 16.—Advices from Gunnison City report that last Tuesday at Caraco & Fay's mining camp, 28 miles from Gunnison, two men were instantly killed and two fatally mangled by an explosion of nitro-glycerine. Five men were preparing a blast when the charge of glycerine prematurely exploded. L. Swenzy was blown into the stream. The body has not been recovered. It is supposed to be buried under the rocks thrown by the explosion. Jesse Freez, colored, was badly mangled and instantly killed. Two others, names unknown, were terribly mangled and will die. The other men escaped unhurt.

Indications.

WASHINGTON, August 16.—For Tennessee and the Ohio Valley, fair weather, winds mostly easterly, stationary or higher temperature. For Lower Lake Region, warmer, fair weather, variable winds, mostly southeasterly, stationary or lower pressure. For Upper Lake Region and Upper Mississippi and Lower Missouri Valleys, partly cloudy weather, warmer, southerly winds, falling barometer, possibly followed in north and west portion by rising barometer and by colder northwest winds. Reports from Minnesota, Dakota, Montana, Idaho and Manitoba are missing.

Big Blazes.

CLEVELAND, August 16.—At 2 o'clock this morning a fire broke out, supposed to be spontaneous combustion, in the waste engine room of Rogers & Yangs, furniture manufacturers, Nos. 96 to 100 Leonard street. It communicated to Gebhard's sewing machine cabinet factory adjoining and the Cleveland Woodenware Company's factory across the street in the rear of Rogers & Yangs. Loss, $30,000; insurance, $16,500. The building is owned by J. B. Hervey; loss, $20,000, Gebhard, $15,000; insurance, $12,000. Woodenware Company, $2,000 on building and $2,000 on stock.

The Murderous Apaches.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., August 16.—A ranche fifteen miles east of Elrita was burned and one woman and a boy killed by the Apaches. The report of the destruction of the village and the massacre of the inhabitants near Rio Paerco is untrue. We have reliable reports that in all twenty Mexicans and one soldier have been killed and one white woman captured by the Indians since the 10th inst. No damage by the Indians is reported within fifteen miles of the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad. Quite a number of ranchmen are moving together for safety.

Train Wreckers.

GALVESTON, August 16.—The News' San Antonio special says an unsuccessful attempt was made to wreck an excursion train having on board five hundred and fifty men, women and children, by laying ties across the track. The train was going at the rate of thirty miles an hour. The engine struck the ties, which were thrown from the track, badly bruising five men riding on the cow-catcher.

Hanlan and Ross.

TORONTO, August 16.—Hanlan last night sent the editor of the Boston Herald a check for $200 to cover the deposit made by Wallace Ross for a four-mile race for $2,000. The race will take place on any course mutually agreed upon.

Murdered for $20.

DENVER, August 16.—Mauvell Cordova was murdered Saturday near Las Animas, Colorado, by one Sanchez, who committed the deed to obtain $20 which the victim was supposed to have in his pocket.

Fatal Explosion.

QUEBEC, August 16.—Saturday last a fog gun on Bird Rocks exploded the stock of powder at the station, killing Mr. Chiasson Cooper, his son and an assistant.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

The House of Lords Agrees to Accept the Commons' Amendments,

And the Irish Land Bill Will Become Law.

News Wafted Across the Ocean From the Old World—European Echoes—The Daily Cablegrams.

England.

LONDON, August 16.—In connection with the adoption in the Commons last night of the last amendment of the House of Lords to the Land Bill, striking out the provision for staying proceedings for debt, Gladstone, adverting to remarks made early in the evening that a farce was being played, asserted the opposition leaders were not aware, when the sitting of the House commenced, of the course the Government intended to take in regard to a single amendment. Parnell, who said he thought the conduct of the Government all through contemptible, characterized Gladstone's statement as scarcely credible, for which he was called to order.

T. P. O'Conor, Home Ruler, trenchantly denounced the Government for its surrender.

O'Donnell (Home Ruler), having said he noticed the Liberals were green with terror at a prospect of dissolution, ridiculed the idea of a crisis.

Healey (Home Ruler) said he agreed there had been no compromise, for the Tories hadn't needed to ask it from a government which, having surrendered to Afghanistan, the Transvaal and Mr. Bradlaugh might be expected to make no difficulty about a land bill.

The Malloy Boys.

NEW HAVEN, August 16.—The strongest link yet found in the chain of evidence against the Malloy boys is the statement of a saloon keeper at West Haven shore that James Malloy was in his place on Friday evening previous to Jennie Cramer's body being found on the beach. On being questioned by the Chief of Police he said: "I don't want to get into any trouble, and I have kept still about this, but James Malloy was in my place that Friday night. He didn't have Jennie Cramer with him, though, and I never said he did. I knew them both. He came in and had a glass of beer and I think carried a glass to a gentleman friend who stood in the doorway." Chief of Police Webster said to a Union reporter who discovered this evidence that it was the strongest thing yet and with others already obtained advances the investigation wonderfully.

THE COMMISSIONERS' MEETING.

Some Public Improvements of a Minor Character Passed Upon.

At the meeting of the Board of Public Improvements this morning President Flad reported that he had given the following permits:

To the Western Union Telegraph Company to erect poles on the east side of Third street between Olive and Locust.

To George C. Schneider to move a pump on Broadway and Buchanan.

To the People's Theater to erect fancy lamps on Sixth and Walnut.

To William Cook to lay a sidewalk on the corner of Vandeventer and Finney avenues.

These acts were approved and the president was instructed to take steps to have forfeited a deposit of $228 by Kane & Cullinane, who threw up a contract for laying water pipe, having made a mistake in bidding.

The President was authorized to approve the plat of Shamburg Place, which the Street Commissioner submitted, as soon as changes were made to show that Sarah street runs through to Bell avenue.

The scales of F. Becker were declared an obstruction and ordered removed.

September 6 was designated as the day for receiving proposals for the Ninth street or Custom-house sewer.

The purchase of eight guns to put the Work-house guards on war footing was ordered.

The appointment of George Hasforther as a temporary guard at the Work-house by Superintendent Kunz, was confirmed.

This afternoon the board opened several bids for fire-plugs and stop-valves, referring them to the Water Commissioner.

What Various People Are Accused Of.

A warrant returned to-day accuses August Schaefer of taking unlawful possession of 1717 Cass avenue, which is owned by J. H. Beldsmeier.

Tom Burk, alias Brooks, is charged with the theft of fifteen bottles of wine from Fred Straube.

Alonzo Brown is awaiting trial for cutting William Becker, called a deadly assault in the warrant.

James Ross swears to the use of a knife upon him by Fred Smith.

The Test of the Gambling Law.

The keno cases which encumber the Court of Criminal Correction docket were called to-day, but at the request of Mr. William Patrick, who appears for Pate and proposes to test the gambling law in the higher courts, they went over until to-morrow. Charles P. Johnson, Police Commissioner Kinkead, Dr. J. C. Nidelet and quite a number of unusual visitors were in the court-room.

From Yesterday's Last Edition.

The Doctors' Delusion.

WASHINGTON, August 15.—The midday bulletin was not issued till nearly 1 o'clock. The pulse was then 118, temperature 99, respiration 19. The bulletin says since the last bulletin the President has not vomited again, and he is now able to retain nourishment on his stomach. At the morning dressing there was a free discharge of pus and the wound is in good condition. The President's temperature has fallen since the morning, but the midday bulletin

APPEARS ALARMING.

The surgeons say it is not so. They attribute the higher pulse to exhaustion, caused by vomiting, and look upon the reduction in temperature as a favorable symptom. There is uneasiness outside of the White House, and the surgeons don't say much. It is evident they do not feel as confident as formerly, but feel more hopeful than last night or this morning. Morphine was again administered last night before he could sleep, and while he is not recovered from the last operation, as the surgeons hoped, they still insist that he will rally and believe he will get well.

The Cotton Crop.

WASHINGTON, August 15.—The following was issued to-day by the Department of Agriculture: Cotton returns to this department of August 1st show a decrease in the condition since the returns of July. The average condition is 88 on the first of this month against 95 July 1. As compared with last year the condition is reported 14 per cent less than at the same time then. The plant is generally reported small, and much shedding of bolls in places, but not reported to any great extent.

France.

PARIS, August 15.—The Bulletin des Pales, an gricultural journal, estimates the wheat crops will be sensibly under the average. Barley and oats are also estimated to show a deficit. Maize gives rise to much uneasiness in the east and south of France. Rye is of good quality but under the average.

KILLED AT A BULL-FIGHT.

LONDON, August 15.—During a bull-fight at Marseilles yesterday several tiers of seats collapsed and twelve persons were killed and 150 injured.

A Desperate Duel.

LITTLE ROCK, August 15.—Information has just reached this city of a desperate duel fought in the Indian Nation last week between T. O. Carpenter, a Choctaw Chief, and Col. Amos Price, a prominent citizen of the Creek Nation. Price was killed and Carpenter fatally wounded. Considerable feeling exists over the affair, as both were among the most prominent men in the Nation.

Deaths.

MEMPHIS, August 15.—C. W. Anderson, formerly railroad conductor, died at the City Hospital this morning from an overdose of morphine administered by his own hands.

James Lynch and James Connell died yesterday, both at their boarding-house, 19 Jackson street, from overheat.

DURBAN, August 15.—The Boer flag is hoisted at Pretoria in the Transvaal.

FINNEY TO THE FORE.

Another Open Letter on the Subject of Crittenden.

Some Logical Deductions for the Benefit of the Governor.

From the Plattsburg (Mo.) Purifier.

ST. LOUIS, August 4.

EDITOR PURIFIER: Unless I am grossly misinformed of the political sentiment of the State, your Democracy stands entirely unimpeached, and if I am not equally mistaken in the significance of the name you have given your paper, your stalwartism as a Democrat is only equaled by the purity of your motives in advocating the men and measures that can best subserve the interest of the party. I, therefore, having constituted myself the historian of Crittenden's administration, respectfully ask the privilege of your columns for a few words, explanatory and critical, touching the comments of the Missouri press regarding my late open letter to Gov. Crittenden. Through the kindness of a friend who is as unswerving in his Democracy as he is eminent in the councils of the party, I have been enabled to read the views of the leading journals of the State. While a large number of them indorse my arraignment of Gov. Crittenden, many attack my personal motives, but not one of them attempts to defend the Governor. The charges and specifications in my letter were purposely made minute, and I here undertake to pledge myself that if any one with the authority from Gov. Crittenden will engage to deny the truth of anything I have said, I will either prove it beyond question or publicly apologize for having said it. A portion of the provincial Democratic press seems to have absorbed its ideas either from the St. Louis Republican or the Sedalia Democrat. The usually discerning editor of the former, in a moment of inattention, asks why I supported Crittenden with the knowledge of the crimes laid to his charge? A careful perusal of my letter would have shown that gentleman that the catalogue of mixed knaveries and imbecilities which I have fastened upon Gov. Crittenden had all, with one exception, been committed after his installation. That exception was not known to me until a month ago. When consulting the records of the State, I discovered that Gov. Johnson, certainly one of the ablest criminal lawyers in the West, had, as chairman of a committee of the House of Representatives, practically pronounced him guilty of "willful murder!" On the other hand, the brilliant editor of the Sedalia Democrat writes a column article, which, with his well known power of argument and invective, urges the necessity of discipline in the party. Though it is "bitter and abusive" of myself, I yet confess to have read it with a large measure of approval. It conveys many salutary lessons to the Democratic party, all of which, as he predicts, will prove to be unheeded, and for very plain reasons. They are these: We must have leaders in the Democratic party in whose honor and ability not only the subordinates in special command, but the honest rank and file can have unquestioned confidence. Neither Mr. Hyde nor Maj. Ewards will say that Mr. Crittenden possesses even a faded picture of either of these qualifications. Should they think so—and the wisest of men are often led astray by the bias of their own predilections—a very slight conversation with the leading Democrats of the State will speedily disabuse their minds of any such erroneous impression. In fact, Maj. Edwards, in the very article that denounces my lack of party discipline, says: "What Crittenden needs to do is simply to be a Democrat." A beautiful, compact and sagacious piece of advice, which, if not taken as per prescription, will inevitably result in the death of the patient. I am afraid, however, that the doctor arrived too late. Mr. Crittenden is, politically, in articulo mortis. Even the diamond-brained editor of the Sedalia Democrat cannot make the "rough and ready" Democrats of the State, of which I am one, believe that because Tom Crittenden is Governor of Missouri he has, therefore, been anointed with the holy oil which, in the mediæval ages, was supposed to have given a divine right to kings. On the contrary, when charged with "willful murder" and malfeasance in office, with, all the specifications given, he rushes, as did the rascally Greeks of old, into the temple of his gubernatorial prerogative, and, feeling himself safe on that consecrated ground, opens the curtain of the inner sanctuary and "laughs as much as any man in Missouri." He will be secure in his prison for the balance of his term of office, unless the outraged Democrats of the State pull down the building two years hence. Maj. Edwards says the Democracy is affected with the "dry rot." Not so! Its vitality from the days of Jefferson has remained unimpaired, and will so continue, until its members sell themselves and their country for thirty pieces of silver (more or less). I admit that it has been sorely wounded on many a gallant battlefield, but the bullets have always come from those wearing its own uniform. That it is now suffering from the same kind of a wound in Missouri, and at the same hands, is not to be denied, but as Dr. Bliss, in attendance upon the distinguished patient at Washington, telegraphed a few days ago, "a healthy discharge of pus is all that is needed." As in the case of President Garfield, to effect this, a surgical operation may be necessary. With that successfully accomplished and such splintered ribs and unhealthy pus as Crittenden drawn from the wound, its pulse, temperature and respiration will again be normal and the grand old party may march on with the approval of its own people and the benediction of mankind. Toy hatchets in the hands of embeciles can never supplant the battle-axe of the warrior. Give us a leader. Not one whose intellectual stature is only high enough to keep a toilet shop in the cast-off shoes of John S. Phelps. Why does not little George Vest try on the fast mouldering garments of Stephen A. Douglas? Nobody in Illinois can wear them, and unless I am mistaken, they will fit him like paper on a wall. Why do not Marmaduke and Hockaday come to the front? I can assure them that the whilom law forbidding a Confederate to sit in the executive mansion has, since the last election, been repealed by the Union Democrats themselves. Is there any reason why Armstrong should not again assume command of the old Imperial Guard—the State Central Committee? Why can not "Charley" Johnson be instructed to organize the young brawn of the party, as he so well can, into a corps d'armee, which Geo. H. Thomas or Stonewall Jackson might envy? Why should not that trio of Missouri statesmen, Broadhead, Phelps and Brown, be asked to sit at the head of the table in the councils of the Democratic party? And finally, why is the sutler who stole the baton of our Field Marshal not ordered to the rear, where he might ply a lucrative avocation in teaching dancing and selling pomatum to the straggliers and cowards of the army? Why? Because there are yet a few Democrats who believe that he is ex-officio the leader of the party. Pheugh! Respectfully,

JOHN D. FINNEY.

The Pretty Girl Season.

From the New York Herald.

Although there are no laws against hunting for pretty girls in any month of the year, the time in which this sport flourishes most vigorously begins about July 4 and lasts until the equinoctial storm falls due in September. It is, therefore, in its very prime at present, when summer resorts are crowded and young women at these places have nothing to do but look their best. During the colder months such newspaper men as frequent the haunts of the gentler sex seem to discover only the homelier specimens, for sarcastic allusions to the superficial area or cubic measurement of the ears, hands and feet of maidens inhabiting special localities crowd press columns that might much more profitably and decorously be filled with advertisements. In summer, however, this unchivalrous twaddle is suppressed, and the susceptible quill driver goes out with his double-barreled weapon—an eyeglass—and follows his own keen scent from one rural hotel or boarding-house to another. The reports that come back to the public are so enthusiastic as to occasion hopeless confusion in the mind of the reader, for each haunt of the sex seems for beauty to be the most remarkable on record. It is quite generous in writers from out of town to thus tell all they know and believe, but the fact remains that all of them are wrong. The largest supply of these most attractive specimens of animated life is found in the large cities, and does not seem to be seriously affected by heat, drought or the ravages of hunters. At proper hours they may be found in the choicest of up-town neighborhoods, but they most abound where the population is densest, and an east side tenement district can give Fifth avenue heavy odds any day of the year. There is considerable difference between the frequenters of various localities in point of plumage, but the distinctive marks of the species are uniformly the same, and expert judges declare that there is no appreciable difference between the town and country varieties in point of spirit and shyness. No man who desires to go girl-hunting need leave town; he would do far better to brush up his morals and manners, remain on familiar ground and keep his eyes open.

AN INTERESTING PRISONER.

Widow of a Clergyman, and of Aristocratic Connections.

From the New York Times.

A fashionably-dressed lady was among the passengers by the evening coach which drew up to the Elmer House, in Cornwall-on-the-Hudson, about two months ago. She registered as Mrs. Emma Lee Hudson, of No. 23 Park avenue, New York, and was accompanied by two children—a girl about 12 years old, and a boy a few years older. Mrs. Hudson was lady-like and affable, and soon gained the friendship and confidence of the other boarders in the hotel. One of the most intimate acquaintances in her new home was Mrs. William H. Heiser, whose husband is engaged in the hardware business at No. 511 Eighth avenue. Having ascertained that Mr. Heiser had a book account with the firm of Arnold, Constable & Co., Mrs. Hudson went to that house on Thursday, the 4th inst., and bought a bill of goods amounting to $155 50. She ordered them sent to Mrs. Heiser, at the Grand Central Depot. The salesman was not acquainted with Mrs. Heiser, and believing Mrs. Hudson to be that lady, he charged the goods to Mr. Heiser, and sent them to the depot, where they were delivered to Mrs. Hudson. On the following day the bill for the goods was sent to Mr. Heiser. The latter knew his wife had not been in town on the previous day, and upon obtaining a description of the lady who had personated Mrs. Heiser he recognized the person as being the charming Mrs. Hudson. Mr. Heiser reported the case at police headquarters, and Detective Von Gerichten was detailed to watch Mrs. Hudson's Park avenue residence, while Detective Irving was sent to look out for the lady at the Grand Central Depot. Mrs. Hudson visited the Grand Central Depot yesterday and was arrested. The lady was very indignant. She asserted that she was Mrs. Georgiana P. Kensett, of Baltimore, Md., but when the officer insisted on taking her to the station-house she confessed her guilt, and said the goods she had obtained from Messrs. Arnold, Constable & Co. could be found at No. 23 Park avenue. She was arraigned before Justice Murray, in the Yorkville Police Court, in the afternoon. When asked for her statement in response to the charge of swindling, the prisoner replied: "I have nothing to say, your Honor. I obtained the goods from Arnold, Constable & Co. under the name of Mrs. Heiser. I am sorry for what I have done, and it is the first offense I ever committed." The prisoner was committed to jail in default of $1,000 bail.

In the early part of 1876, on the recommendation of a prominent clergyman, Dr. C. F. Oertel, of No. 402 West Twenty second-street, took as a boarder Mrs. Emma Lee Hudson, who had just arrived in the city from Boston. She had with her two children, a boy and a girl. Mrs. Hudson was the wife of David Hudson, who, three years before, had died in Medway, Mass. Mr. Hudson had been a minister of considerable note, studied medicine a few years before he died and graduated as a physician. He married his wife, who was a Miss Lee, in Baltimore, Md.

"She was one of the most cultured persons I ever met," said Dr. Oertel last evening. "She was in my house five months. She had studied something of medicine, and earned a livelihood by manipulating and as an obstetric nurse."

After leaving Dr. Oertel's, Mrs. Hudson boarded in Sixteenth street, and then in Thirty-fifth street. In December, 1879, she went to live in Miss Bronk's boarding-house, at No. 23 Park avenue.

"I did not ask her for any reference or recommendations," Miss Bronk said yesterday. "While with me she was employed as private secretary by Dr. J. Marion Sims, wrote for several papers, canvassed for Appleton's publishing company, and did work for an English mineral water company, which now owes her $500. For the last three months she has done nothing and has had no money—not enough to buy a loaf of bread. I gave her her fare to Cornwall. A few days ago she brought home a package of goods which she said she had picked up in the street. She said she intended to exchange them at Arnold & Constable's. On Thursday she left the house for this purpose. When she was brought back by the detective I thought she had been arrested by mistake. She has suffered greatly during the past week. We were sitting on the stoop a few nights ago, when she suddenly exclaimed: "I wish the angel of death would cover me and my children with his dark wings!"

A Saratoga Gambler's Home.

Saratoga Cor. Philadelphia Times.

Apropos of dwellings it may be mentioned that the private residence of "Charlie" Reed, of the Saratoga Club House, is considered one of the most unique of the new style of modern homes. It has been rebuilt since last summer and is now in one of the old English types of architecture. Like those seen at other summer resorts, every floor and all the wainscoting is of hard wood and stained glass is used for the upper partsof all the windows. These are what are known as French windows and open like doors. But the special feature of the house rendering it wholly original are the designs on the stained glass. There are portraits from life of Mr. and Mrs. Reed and each of their children—they have seven or eight. Also, there are portraits of favorite horses and some jockeys. On the panel of the door of the billiard-room is what those who know him consider a vivid likeness of "Pat" Maney, the steeplechase rider. On one window is seen the famous steeplechase horse Trouble in the act of taking a water leap at the Saratoga course. On another Longfellow and on another Hawthorne are depicted. All the likenesses are said to be good. In one room is a carved wood mantel which cost over $2,500. It has a stained-glass window over it. The collection of bric-a-brac picked up in various parts of Europe is unusually fine.

Burdett-Coutts.

From Olive Logan's London Letter.

From first to last, this marriage has been a regular woman's rights dream. The Baroness, they say, popped the question herself, for Mr. Bartlett, like the old time courier who loved the Queen, felt the sentiment expressed in the couplet:

"Fain would I climb,
But that I fear to fall."

So the kind lady had to do the proposing herself; and now she not only keeps her own name after marriage, but endues her husband with it too. The social extermination which some wiseacres predicted for the Baroness in case she married the young American has not been as devastating as might have been expected. The Princess Frederika of Hanover, the Queen's pet cousin, dined with the Burdett-Coutts's the other night, and gay doings take place the whole time at the Baroness' lovely summer box on Highgate Hill, Holly Lodge.

WORTH LIVING.

I know not what the future may hold,
Or how to others it seems;
But I know my skies have held more gold
Than I used to find in my dreams.

Tho' the whole world sings of hopes deathchilled,
In grateful truth I say
That my best hopes have been fulfilled,
And more than fulfilled, to-day.

Tho' oft my arrow I aim at the sun
To see it fall into the sand,
Yet just as often some work I have done
Is better than I have planned.

I do not always grasp the pleasure
For which I reach, may be;
But just as frequently over-measure
Is given by joy to me.

To-morrow may hide a grief behind it
That will sadden and change my mood;
But we must speak of a thing as we find it,
And I have found life good.

ELLA WHEELER.

THE MONITOR MERRIMAC.

Story of the Brilliant Career of the Noted Confederate Ironclad.

J. R. Eggleston in Philadelphia Times.

When the Federals abandoned the navy yard at Norfolk in 1861 they set fire to the vessels lying there in ordinary. Among these was the Merrimac, one of a class of vessels which, when they were built, were considered the finest specimens of naval architecture afloat. On the occasion in question the Merrimac was burnt to the water line. Her machinery remained intact and it was determined by the Confederate authorities to make of what remained of her an ironclad ram that might give some trouble to the enemy's vessels lying in the waters of Virginia. A structure of oak, sloping like the roof of a house, was built upon the old hulk, and this woodwork was covered with plates of wrought iron two inches thick. The ends of these plates, where they rested on the edge of the old hulk, extended about a foot under water. Below that line the vessel was vulnerable as she had ever been. The rudder-chains, too, were perfectly unprotected, lying exposed on the "fantail," or that portion of the hull which extended out abaft the shield. The wheel was under the forward part of the shield and the pilot was protected by a huge hollow cone of cast iron, perforated with holes for him to see through. The battery of the Merrimac consisted of ten Dahlgren guns: one 11-inch, pointing forward and another pointing aft, and eight 9-inch guns on the sides.

Our crew was made up in a great measure of green countrymen detailed from the different volunteer regiments stationed about Norfolk, but there were some trained seamen among them. From the time of taking them in hand till the day of going into action, an interval of about two weeks, we drilled them incessantly at the guns of the receiving ship, the old frigate United States.

On the forenoon of the 8th day of March, 1862, the Merrimac, or, as she had been newly christened, the Virginia, cast off from the wharf at the navy yard and started on her trial trip. We steamed straight for Hampton Roads. Whatever was the design of our captain, Franklin Buchanan, he kept it to himself. Years afterwards I learned from Catesby Jones, our executive officer, that he had been taken into the captain's confidence, but I am quite certain that no else had. We all thought that we were making an ordinary trial trip. And yet we were rapidly approaching the enemy's vessels—the Cumberland and Congress frigates—that lay at anchor off Newport's News. As a midshipman I had served in both vessels, the Cumberland, in which I had served briefly, being the first vessel I had ever boarded, while the Congress had been my floating home for nearly three years. How natural they looked—their boats at the swinging booms, the Congress with her washclothes between the main and mizzen rigging. How many of the poor fellows who scrubbed their blue shirts on the deck that morning ever had need again of shirts or aught else after that day?

At last there is a sign of life on board the two frigates. Their swinging-booms go alongside; their boats are run to the davits; the Congress pipes down wash-clothes, and now we hear the long roll of our own drum and fife calling us to quarters? There is no longer a doubt of our captain's intentions. He soon appears on the gun deck, makes a stirring appeal to the crew and then takes his station near the wheel.

I commanded the third division of guns and was stationed amidships of the shield. From that station my view of what was going on outside the vessel was restricted to the gun-port, and that was nearly filled by the gun. For a time I could see only the rim of the horizon or the distant shore. But suddenly the side of a great ship, close aboard, came in view. I saw her but for a moment, for the smoke from her broadside of twenty-five guns, promptly answered by our own, soon enveloped her and us. A few moments of the thunder of battle, of sulphurous smoke, of the passing below of the wounded, and then there is a thud as if the vessel had suddenly run aground. There is cheering forward, and soon Flag-Lieutenant Minor passes aft and cries out:

"We've sunk the Cumberland."

The next time I saw the Congress she was aground with some of her sails set. We had taken up a raking position under the stern and a few shots from our broadside guns brought down her flag. Lieutenant Minor was sent in a ship's cutter to receive her surrender, and at the same time two tugs that had been improvised as gunboats ran alongside to take off the prisoners. The tugs were driven off by sharpshooters on shore, and Minor and one of his boat's crew were wounded by musket balls fired out of the gun-deck ports of the Congress. Buchanan, then on the upper deck, on top of the shield, shouted down the hatchway:

"Destroy that d——d ship! They are killing our men under a flag of truce!"

Sadly we proceeded to obey the order, for we believed that the firing on Minor was done without the knowledge of the officers of the Congress. Nevertheless we resumed our firing, while officers on the poop deck of the doomed vessel were waving their white handkerchiefs. But we did not keep it up long, for it was apparent that the Congress had already been set on fire by our hot shot. About this time Buchanan was borne below, wounded by a sharpshooter on shore.

"We have done a very good day's work," I remarked to Catesby Jones, as some time during the afternoon he paused at my division.

"Yes," he replied, "but it isn't over. The Minnesota and St. Lawrence are coming up from Fortress Monroe."

These vessels fired on us at long range, as with the approach of night we steamed over to Sewell's Point to send on shore our dead and wounded.

With early dawn the next day we saw the St. Lawrence back under the guns of Fortress Monroe, the Minnesota apparently aground near the scene of yesterday's battle, and a curious-looking craft, which proved to be the Monitor, lying near her. We steamed over towards the Minnesota, and the Monitor boldly set forth to meet us half way. For hours and hours we bombarded each other without any apparent injury to either vessel. Seeing that every projectile that struck our strange enemy was shattered into fragments against her turret. I ordered my division to cease firing. Calling Catesby Jones' attention to my idle guns, he said: "Well, we're just about to try another plan. We are going to ram her." And we did.

But for a misconception of what the momentum of the Merrimac could accomplish it would have been all over with the Monitor. As it was, our engines were stopped just before we struck her. If they had not been we would undoubtedly have run her under. As it was, after that gentle push she never fired another shot at the Merrimac. Withdrawing entirely out of our range, she was a silent spectator for fully an hour of our practice at long range, with the Minnesota for a target.

When we finally ceased firing and returned to Norfolk it was for the following reasons, as stated by Capt. Jones to each of his division officers: "We can't get nearer the Minnesota than we are, for our draft is the same as hers, and we'll get aground if we try to get nearer. She is now apparently reduced to a mere wreck and I don't think she will ever get afloat again. We have done all that we can do, for the enemy's ironclad keeps out of our range. Our ship is leaking, probably from the loss of her prow when she rammed the Cumberland, and our crew are tired out from working their guns for nearly two days. I think we have fulfilled the mission on which we came and had better return," which accordingly we did, and the next day went in dock to get ready for another raid.

We had met and silenced upwards of 180 guns afloat, to say nothing of the shore batteries. It is safe to say that never before had ten guns successfully encountered such odds. If what I have said be true the Northern version of our encounter with the Monitor is utterly false. And I am sustained not only by all who served on board the Merrimac and the wooden vessels of our little squadron and the thousands who viewed the battle from the neighboring shores, but also by the captain of the Minnesota. In his report to the department he says in effect that, seeing the Monitor silenced and withdrawn from the battle and his own vessel at the mercy of the Merrimac, he had nearly completed his preparations for abandoning and burning the Minnesota, when, much to his joy, the Merrimac returned to Norfolk. It may be as well to add that in her encounter with the Monitor the Merrimac did not sustain any material injury, while I think an inquiry into the reason for the withdrawal of the Monitor will show that her turret would not turn after she had been rammed by the Merrimac.

The last demonstration by the Merrimac was against a Federal fleet of eight or ten vessels, the Monitor among them. They were bombarding Seawell's Point, under the eye, as we heard, of Mr. Lincoln himself, then on a visit to Fortress Monroe. We steamed down from Norfolk and offered battle, when the whole fleet made haste to huddle under the guns of the fortress. We sent in and cut out two transport brigs under their very noses, but the Monitor let slip the splendid opportunity of driving us back to Norfolk a second time.

We are much blamed by our own people for destroying the Merrimac when we did. After the evacuation of Norfolk by our land forces no other course remained to us. We could not go to sea nor up the James river. Unless the vessel had been destroyed her surrender would have been a mere question of time. With the enemy in possession of Norfolk we would have been speedily starved into submission.

SUNDAY IN LONDON.

Puritanism Rampant in the Wickedest City in Europe.

M. D. Conway's Letter to Cin. Commercial.

King Kalakaua is reported by an interviewer as having said that they have strict Sunday laws in his kingdom, and that they are enforced. If so, he is not unlike many other Christians, who know the art of laying aside their piety and resuming it at convenience. Kalakaua caused considerable Sunday labor that he might travel to the Continent on Sunday. However, Sabbath-breaking is a royal privilege in England. Because the Prince of Wales charters a special train on Sunday, to take him to the country seat of a misbelieving Jew, and enjoys the Rothschild festivities and haymaking on Sunday, it must not be supposed that the rest of us can take such liberties with the Decalogue. That it is not so will appear from the following unvarnished tale of an hour passed yesterday in London by two American physicians of my acquaintance, delegates to the Medical Congress. These gentlemen—one from Indianapolis, the other from New York—went to the church in the morning, and finding a friend there asked him to go with them to early dinner. The three drove off in a cab to every large restaurant and cafe in London only to find doors barred and shutters up. On the French cafe at Ludgate Hill a notice said it would be open on Tuesday (Monday being bank holliday). On the Criterion a notice said it would open at 6 o'clock. St. James' had no sign of ever being reopened. The physicians had furnished apartments, which did not supply any meal but breakfast; the exhausting effect of a sermon and the driving about had made them very hungry. The cab was discharged. The three resolved to try a first-class hotel. They went to the Bristol, and there a waiter put his head out of a tempting but empty coffee-room to inform them that they furnished nothing there to any except persons staying in the house. Application at Brown's elicited from a brass-buttoned boy that there were no public rooms there at all. Things began to look serious. Passing along Dover street a charming room full of white tables and elegant waiters in white waistcoats was seen through open windows on the ground floor. The Indianapolitan doctor, who was acting as host, asked the waiter what place that was.

"Junior Navy Club."

"Will you," said the Doctor, "be good enough to tell us where we can get something to eat?"

The waiter called the head waiter.

"We have been wandering about here for an hour, have gone to twenty places, and can't find an eating-place open. Are people in this town expected to starve?"

"Can't tell you what to do, sir."

"What would you do if you were in my place, a stranger, wanting his dinner Sundays as well as other days?"

"I should take along something in my pockets when I went out. As it is you'd better ask a policeman."

The three Americans presently found a policeman, who told them that their only chance was to go to a public house where something might be got. "So," said the Indianapolitan, "there's no difficulty about getting brandy and whisky on Sunday?" "Not a bit." A second policeman addressed said he had a dim notion of some place where a Sunday luncheon could be got, but that was not satisfying. It was after 2 o'clock, and a compulsory Tanner experiment was resolved upon, when it occurred to one of the three that the Charing Cross Hotel at the Station, which sends off Sabbath breakers to the Continent, might be open. So it proved, and such uninviting dinners as that place can supply were obtained. The clerk there declared that that was the only place in this metropolis of near four millions of souls where a luncheon could be procured by any wayfarer. And yet Londoners wonder why Americans prefer to get out of England as soon as they can. And all the while the billiard tables of the aristocratic clubs are in full blast, and the gin and beer are in continuous flow. For twenty-four hours in every week London is a cemetry full of poor men's bones, holy rottenness, and other loathsomeness characteristic of piously pretentious sepulchers.

Sarah Bernhardt's School.

Paris Letter to Philadelphia Times.

All this speaks badly for art progress in Gaul, but Sarah means to mend that, for Sarah has come back to us, and, having a free foot, proposes to create a new school. She did try singing, but her teacher declined going on after the second lesson from a difference of opinion with his pupil, who pretended to teach the musician, not to be taught by him. Sarah starts for the provinces on Monday, and when she has startled provincials during a two months' tour will proceed to star the Continent, except Prussia, beginning with Spain and ending on the banks of the Neva, with Mr. Jarrett as her managing man. This over, she may fulfill her engagement at the Vaudeville, but that is not certain, as M. Zola's promised play, "Renee," is now reported as received at the Francaise, within which "ungrateful building" Miss Bernhardt declares that not even wild horses could drag her. Madame Edmond Adam says that the eminent tragedienne intends to open a theater of her own, with Mlle. Sophie or Suzanne—neither being her real name, either may be assigned to her—Arnoux's unpublished tragedy of "Carmagnola" as the first item upon its bill of fare; but Madame Edmond Adam is the patroness of Sophie, or Suzanne, Arnoux, and perhaps estimates the value of that lady's composition more highly than the eminent one does, so that for choice, and attempting to be predictive, I should indicate the United States as the scene of Dona Sol's next campaign on her own account.

A CONSUMMATE IDYL.

The string that tied the dog fetched loose,
The dog came howling on;
That measly saucy cook ed his goose,
His cup of joy was gone.
Swift for the picket fence he sped,
As swallows skim the plain;
Two inches scant the dog he led;
He never smiled again.

Bright eyes were passing on the street,
Soft voices laughed in glee,
And merry shouts from happy hearts
Called other hearts to see.
He reached the fence, he strove to climb
With sudden, mighty strain;
Sore was his need, scant was his time—
He never smiled again.

Where erst, like robins in the spring,
His sweetheart's voice he heard,
He hears her father's accents ring
With many a heartless word.
One leg the bristling fence bestrides,
But hastening in his train
The haughty dog his speed derides—
He never smiled again.

Around him whirled the giddy throng
With happy fancies blest;
Around him rose the roystering song,
The laugh, the merry jest;
He lived—for life may long be borne,
Ere sorrow breaks its chain;
But that dog chewed him all forlorn—
He never smiled again.

PETTICOATS.

A German Movement in Favor of Their Abolition.

London Cor. New York Times.

There is a class of woman who barely escaped being men. Masculinity is apparent in craniological structure, face, form, voice and manners. Aspiring to the rights of men, these feminine iconoclasts of all things wish to wear the pantaloons, and all the distinguishable articles of man's apparel. The perniciousness of this unnatural idea spread to Germany. In Berlin lately a lot of frau got together and organized themselves into a meeting. A chairwoman was elected, and a violent war upon the petticoat immediately commenced. A few maidens were induced to join the strong-minded matrons, and add their soprano voices to the tenor howl of their elders. The petticoat was denounced as typical of the tyranny of man, a proposition rather out of place, seeing that woman invented the garment herself. Its inconveniences and its sanitary disadvantages were especially dwelt upon by the speakers. A real womanly woman, Frau Peters, protested against the substitution of breeches for petticoats. She regarded the abused petticoat and outward, round, full garment as best adapted to the female form, and in every way becomingly graceful. But Frau Peters was indignantly voted down and silenced. The chairwoman was the presiding genius of the revolt, and at her suggestion the association was dubbed the "Clothing League for the Abolition of Petticoats." Members pledged themselves to immediately discard the raiment and substitute "a dualistic form of covering for the legs as well as for the arms. That means pants and coats, or jackets resembling the latter. Berlin will be amazed at the sight of a number of human ducks waddling along Unter den Linden, for waddle women must who undertake to wear the straight-line garments of men instead of the curve-line garments of women. The adoption of male costume will of course necessitate the cutting of the hair, unless the women adopt the pigtail fashion of the washtub Chinese. But when women adopt the apparel of men there will be an end to romance and marriage. The flowing drapery that conceals and reveals, and its graceful undulations and circular sweep, which make beauty more beautiful, charms and solicit the homage of man for the wearer. But pants. What man could fall in love with a woman in pants, and what husband would like to see his own hanging on one chair, and those of his spouse on another? Fancy a sweet-faced girl mending the seat of her pantaloons! Oh, gentle spirit of romance! But there is another trouble which the courageous, strong-minded have not canvassed. Women sit on the floor to pull off and put on their stockings. The reason of such a nightly and morning proceeding is its anatomical convenience. A man, built on the straight line, can throw his foot easily over the knee to pull off or put on socks; a woman, built on the curved line, which necessitates fuller, rounder limbs, cannot follow man in his pedal gymnastics. Therefore, the adoption of pants by women would make a spectacle every night and morning which would move Phidias to tears and Venus to indignation. Picture it; think of it; women sitting on floors when "the stars are in the quiet skies," pulling off their pants, and in the same sitting posture pulling on their pants and buttoning their suspenders when "jocund day stands tiptoe on the misty mountain top." Ah, never again would any Romeo feel like exclaiming:

"But, soft! What light from yonder window breaks?
It is the east, and Juliet is the sun!"

Fashion and Distress.

From the Philadelphia Times.

These foreign papers assert that few people, except those engaged in our textile manufactories, are aware how fashion has aggravated the distress which has prevailed in the agricultural and industrial population of this country. Formerly the long-haired wool, known as "lustre wool," was extensively used in the manufacture of ladies' dresses, producing a material of beautiful texture. Then follow statistics of the increase and decrease of the wool trade, with an estimate of the total loss to the wool farmers of the kingdom of "nearly seven millions sterling."

Ladies of high rank, who form the association above referred to, have still further appealed to the leaders af the London fashions. They state: "The unsatisfactory state of the English woolen industry, and the depression among the manufacturers, has necessarily occasioned great loss to the wool growers. Both classes assign a sudden change of fashion as the immediate cause of their misfortunes"

Not very long ago reference was made to the pathetic appeal of the silk weavers of Italy to the ladies of France and England, in which they portrayed their sufferings, caused simply by the adoption of the woolen and cotton fabrics and the limited demand for silk among society women, and only a year or two ago, when imported birds were used as bonnet decorations, ribbon manufacturers failed to employ the usual number of hands, and hence the distress among families of the ribbon weavers in our very midst. And thus is trade influenced by woman's caprice and fashion's freaks.

Would it not be a good idea for our American ladies to take the same interest in domestic industries as the ladies of France and England do in their national prosperity? The beauty and durability of American silk is universally acknowledged; we have facilities for being producers from the raising of the worm to the manufacturing of the choicest and most original fabrics, and yet in some instances such is the absurd prejudice against home creations, this silk cannot be sold here unless it is represented to be of foreign brand, and is marked at a higher price than is usually charged for silks made in our very midst and sold by home merchants as American silks. Why is this, when these fabrics compare most favorably in design, coloring and finish to the foreign textiles, and are certainly superior for their long-wearing qualities?

Illuminating Niagara.

Niagara Falls Special to New York Herald.

The sixteen electric lights, each of 2,000 candle power, in position to-night with a clear atmosphere, a cool northwest breeze and a full moon, combined with the electric lights of the Prospect Park Company, illuminated the Falls most grandly. A large number of visitors are here enraptured with the view, the younger ones chasing here and there like children, delighted at every turn of the revolving lights, while the elder ones take it more calmly, and gaze long and steadily on it. The American Falls look more beautiful than ever. The dark shadows from the Prospect Park lights have been overcome and illuminated from those on the Canada shore. The lights reach with striking brilliancy Table Rock Point, and three-fourths the way across the Horseshoe Falls. The deep green waters, tinged with the white foam as it comes tumbling over the Horseshoe, shooting up great volumes of struggling spray, with 10,000 candle power lights reflecting upon it, is a scene far too grand to be described. Terrapin Tower Point is the only weak spot in the whole scene, but Superintendent Rhodes will at once add three lights or more if required, on the Prospect House, to reach that point. When these are placed both falls will be reached at every point, and the whole scene made perfect. This new feature will form a great acquisition to the falls, and one which can not fail to be appreciated by the visitors.

Jesse James' Bride.

From the Omaha Republican.

Annie Ralston, the girl who married Jesse James, the celebrated train robber, six or seven years ago at Independence, Mo., was formerly a resident of Omaha. She is well remembered here by several parties who became well acquainted with her while she was here on a lengthy visit during her childhood. In 1874 and 1875 she again visited Omaha, and during her stay here she was the guest of her cousin, who was the wife of a well-known business man who is yet in business here. While in Omaha she attended the dancing-school of Prof. Duval, in Caldwell Block, in company with her cousin, and made the acquaintance of quite a number of young men, who have probably forgotten her. She was a handsome, pleasant and rather intelligent young lady, and it was with the greatest surprise that the writer of these lines read the announcement of her marriage, at or near Independence, which was her family home, to the noted Jesse James, within a year after she left Omaha. This incident was mentioned, in the course of conversation yesterday, to a well-known Omaha character, now in Colorado, who used to travel with the James boys. Said he: "You must not think that that big reward of $50,000 will be the means of catching the James gang. In the first place they have separated and scattered. It is not generally known how the James boys operate, but I can tell you as, I got it straight from a man who was in with them on two or three jobs. Jesse and Frank go into a farming community and become acquainted with the men, and pick out certain ones, after a careful study of their character, to join with them in a particular robbery. They carefully broach the subject to them, and if they are willing they agree to give them all the way from $100 to $500 each. They are required to hold the horses and fire off guns and raise a racket, while Jesse and Frank, with one or two experienced trusties, do the robbing. Immediately after the completion of the job the farmers are paid the stipulated sum, whether the haul is large or small, and they ride to their homes, while the James boys strike out to a place of safety. The men who have been inveigled into the job are never asked to go into a similar undertaking a second time, but they ever afterwards remain under the power and fear of the noted robber chieftains, upon whom they dare not squeal, for by so doing they would give themselves away. They always stand ready to protect and secrete the James boys when they are hard pressed. This explains why the James boys have so many friends in Missouri, and why it is so difficult to catch them. It is as hard to find them in Missouri as it would be to find a needle in a haystack.

White Sulphur Springs.

Special Correspondence Chicago Times.

Within the last two or three days there has been a perfect rush of Western arrivals here by people who have never visited this locality before. Cincinnati and St. Louis send the greatest number. Chicago people have too many charming summer resorts nearer home. It is absolutely marvelous to witness what visitors continue to endure in their efforts to gain a foothold here, where every bit of vantage ground is occupied. For the last two nights the ladies' reception-room has been given up to cots with lady occupants. When ladies are willing to relinquish all claims to privacy or even comfort and consent to camp down fifteen or twenty in number in one room, they are certainly very anxious to go through the regulation summer escape from their homes. It may do for men to be sleeping around in corners, hallways, and the like, without a single toilet facility, but how fashionable ladies can extract any comfort out of it surpasses imagination. But from the animated features of these unfortunates in the ballroom and about the hotel verandas one would hardly think but that they had everything they could desire. There is an air of good nature, however, upon the part of every one that makes up for many discomforts inevitable in the entertainment of so great a crowd in such comparatively narrow surroundings. Of all the Southern types at this place there are no more interesting characters than are sent here from the State of Virginia. These characters are the old leaders of fashion who led society here before the war. One pompous old Judge, with a bland air and a hearty expansion of his chest, exclaimed upon the hotel steps this morning: "I say, sah! there is no place on this yere earth that is the equal to the White Sulphur, sah. I challenge contradiction to this statement, sah!" A Southern friend who had traveled in the North asked the Judge: "Have you ever visited any other watering-place, Judge?" "No, never; and what is more, I never intend to visit any other place." There is a fair, unprejudiced way of looking at things for you! This same Judge had a pleasant way of describing his chats with his friends. He said, "At no place in this yere world, sah, could I find so many of my old friends. Why I, sah, could'nt move a peg, sah! without running up against some old friends with whom I could swap lies, sah!"

LOCAL BREVITIES.

Eight teachers recently dismissed by the School Board Teachers' Committee were yesterday reinstated.

Four small stables in the rear of 1320 Montgomery street were burned at about 10 o'clock last night. Total loss, $1,500; insurance $600.

The thirty-third annual election of the Roman Catholic Total Abstinence and Benevolent Society was held at St. Lawrence O'Toole's Hall yesterday morning.

Wm. H. Bannett was arrested on an incoming train last night by Sergeant Philley, on information received from Charleston, Mo., charging Bannett with grand larceny.

Lizzie Gray and Charles Lewis got into a fight at the corner of Eighth and Lesperance streets last night, in which Lewis seized Lizzie's under lip in his teeth and completely severed it. Lewis was arrested.

Last night quite a congregation of Canadians met at No. 18 South Fifth street and organized with W. W. Jones as chairman and Mr. Gravel as secretary. This evening they will meet again and make complete arrangements for the reception of Hanlan.

Wm. P. Golden and Dr. Cronin used to be partners in a cigar store at the corner of Easton and Garrison avenues. Cronin sold out to Golden. Then the Doctor would get a little change, until Golden felt constrained to sue Cronin for $185 before Justice B. P. Taaffe. The plaintiff got $114.

F. L. Jordan, an employe of Mr. B. Spyer, the diamond dealer on Fourth street, is missing. He started for the Commercial Bank at 1 p. m. yesterday with a $500 check and $150 cash belonging to his employer, to make a deposit. Five diamonds valued at $50 each have also disappeared. The detectives are looking for the young man.

A serious shooting affair occurred at Cahokia about 3 p. m. yesterday. There are in this village two rival factions with their respective leaders—Francis Lavalle and Clovis Soucy. Two partisans, Alex. Perio and an old Frenchman of the Lavalle faction, met yesterday, and a fight ensued, in which Perio was shot in the abdomen, and is now in a very critical condition.

At the meeting of the Board of Health yesterday, Mayor Ewing and four members were present. Maggie Robinson and Tobias Clay were admitted to the Insane Asylum. The Health Commissioner's report for the week shows 288 patients in the hospital. The wonderful increase of patients at the various hospitals was a matter of wonderment to some of the board.

A shooting affair occurred at the corner of Broadway and Hempstead street at about 8:30 last evening. Charley Steele and his wife kept a boarding house at this place in a building which they rented from Mr. Humminghaus. Mr. H. called on the Steele family last night and found the husband on a spree, and practicing with his revolver, using his wife as a target. The ball did not take effect, but when Mr. Humminghaus interfered he got a ball in the hip. Steele is still at large.

A fire broke out in the furniture factory and lumber yard of Aude Brothers at about 11 o'clock last night. On the first floor of the building were the offices, the pattern rooms, the storage department and the machinery; above were the varnishing and carving rooms. The fire originated in a lumber pile at the rear of the building. The damage to the office and warehouse was slight, all the papers being saved, the patterns being the only thing seriously damaged. The loss, which amounts to about $15,000, is covered by $17,500 insurance. The cause of the fire is not known.

A COMMUNICATION from Capt. T. P. Leathers published in the New Orleans States, of Saturday, is a fair statement of the position in which steamboat owners stand when an accident occurs. The United States Government compels the owner or master to use a certain description of iron in the making of boilers, which is inspected by United States Inspectors. The Government also gives a certificate to the engineer, showing that he is competent to take charge of the boilers and engines. After all this, if an accident occurs, the owners and captain are prosecuted and held responsible for loss of life and property. This is all wrong, as the captain and owners have no control of the engineer, as he is a licensed officer of the United States Government. The United States Government Inspectors and engineers should be held responsible for all loss and damage of life and property.

A Visit to Henry Clay's Tomb.

Lexington (Ky.) Cor. Macon Telegraph.

Here we visited Ashland farm, the home of the "Great Harry of the West." All of that once magnificent farm (except a portion owned by James Clay and on which he now resides) was bought by the State of Kentucky. A portion has been set apart for an agricultural and mechanical school. The old residence, on account of its dilapidated condition, has been rebuilt by one of his sons, on the same model. A good many of the trees planted by the hands of Mr. and Mrs. Clay, as ornaments to the grounds, have been cut down and carried away. He is buried on one of the most elevated spots in the Lexington Cemetery. The State of Kentucky has erected over his remains a very imposing monument of granite and marble, cut from its own quarries. In the basement of the monument, through a glass door, is seen his tomb, on which is inscribed one of those eloquent sentences, taken from one of his speeches in Congress, in which he calls on God to bear him witness to the purity of his motives and the absence of any desire for self-aggrandizement that prompted his advocacy of the pending measure before Congress.

Mrs. Fillmore's Husbands.

From the Chicago Times.

The death of Mrs. Millard Fillmore serves to recall a singular incident connected with her two husbands. In 1847, while she was the wife of Hon. Ezekiel McIntosh, of Albany, Mr. Fillmore was candidate for the position of State Comptroller of New York. Some persons who desired to defeat his election raised about $20,000 for the purpose and placed it in the hands of Mr. McIntosh, instructing him to place it in a bank in his own name and not to make the matter public. He did as desired, but before the fund could be drawn out to use for election purposes the treasurer fell sick and died. Mr. Fillmore was elected Comptroller, and many years afterward married Mrs. McIntosh, and received, as a part of her dowry, the money that had been raised to defeat his election. The ex-President used to enjoy telling the story, and often remarked that "the money was placed where it would do the most good" to him.

City of St. Louis, State of Missouri, ss.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, a Notary Public within and for said city and State, at my office, this first day of August, 1881.

(Seal.) RALPH TALBOT, Notary Public.

WHEN the Jeannette gets back from the North Pole she will be revictualed and started off immediately on a search for ROSCOE CONKLING.

AN Italian lady in Washington City who has intricate relations with the spirit world has assured the public that President GARFIELD will recover.

THE opinion seems to be general that when the Republic of Ireland is proclaimed, the rotation in office will be so rapid that candidates' heads will positively swim.

AND now our Nihilistic friend HARTMANN is laying the nucleus of a skirmishing fund. This makes two RICHMONDS in the field, with VICTORIO and BON-AMENA still to hear from.

A MEETING of the Western Associated Press is to be held at Grand Rapids, Mich., to-morrow. After business has been transacted the moguls will take a trip to Petosky and seine for trout in the purling streams which sparkle in that locality.

OUR distinguished and powerful Government at Washington should drop a perfumed note to the Apaches, who are misbehaving in New Mexico, requesting them to simmer down. This would conform, we think, with what is known as "The Moral Suasion Policy," but upon this point we are not altogether clear.

MR. FINNEY has been trying his hand at another letter on the fruitful subject of CRITTENDEN. This epistle, which is somewhat explanatory, is reproduced on our second page. If there is such a thing in this State as a Society for the Prevention of Inhumanity to Man, it would do well to place Mr. FINNEY under bonds to keep the peace.

THERE is a frightful wrangle going on about this time between the Young and the Old Democracy in Ohio. The adolescent wing of the party seems to have secured a comfortable position on the shady side of BOOKWALTER'S barrel and some of the veterans who "fit" with SAM MEDARY are of the opinion that the Constitution has been violated in its most sacred parts.

VERY naturally the Republican assumes that our account of the JAY GOULD monopoly of the Mississippi Barge business is unfounded. The name of that paper should be changed to the Alibi Guard. Not being able to obtain news itself, it has conceived the mistaken idea that its chief business is to furnish an alibi, as it were, for all news printed by live contemporaries.

TWO of the negroes appointed on the Philadelphia police force by a Democratic Mayor are graduates of college. A negro or two who had rub bed their flat noses against the classics, and who could apply some of the rules of trigonometry and geometry in chasing evil-doers, would ornament the St. Louis police force to a degree that would be almost æsthetic at this writing.

IT wouldn't be a bad thing for St. Louis if some BOSS SHEPHERD would rise in his might, clean and pave the town in spite of everybody, and charge the cost to the taxpayers. We have some municipal BONAPARTES here, but they run on the narrow gauge. A little steal now and then from some contingent fund or a "whack-up" with the macadam ring satisfies their craving for wealth and glory.

THERE is a vacancy in the Fire Department occasioned by the death of Assistant BEGGS. A worthy candidate for the place is presented in the person of WM. J. HOBBS. It is true that Mr. HOBBS is not a member of the department, but he has had all the experience necessary. He hasn't missed a fire in St. Louis for twelve years, and on several occasions has gone to Chicago to witness conflagrations. He is a vigorous, robust, agile young man, and we hope that Chief SEXTON will appoint him at once.

THE genial and poetic ROGERS, who served Mr. HAYES in the capacity of Private Secretary, seems to have picked up a few points while dallying around the White House. He is now residing in Washington, and is prosecuting claims before the Government which were pending during his official term as Secretary. It is claimed that such conduct is in violation of law, but the statute quoted does not seem to cover the case. It applies only to officers, clerks and employes of the departments, meaning, evidently, those in charge of the various Secretaries. It doesn't make the slightest difference what ROGERS turns his mind to so he doesn't write poetry. The American people will forgive him everything but that.

A GREAT many well known actresses in New York are finding that one of the penalties of their fame is the appropriation of their names and photographs by ladies who figure behind the footlights in the lowest dives. MAUD GRANGER is working for a dollar a night in a Bowery dive three doors away from the cellar where MARY ROZE sings for the same sum and a percentage of the beer sold. Miss CLARA MORRIS in tights and Miss FANNY DAVENPORT singing "La-de-dah" are features of a Pittsburg show and poor little EMMA ABBOTT is the end woman of a female minstrel show in the same company with a banjoist named ROSE EYTINGE. MAGGIE MITCHELL, LOTTA, ADELAIDE NEILSON, and CATHERINE LEWIS are in another big combination, and MARY ANDERSON and Mme. JANAUSCHEK in another. Of course nothing can be done in a case of this kind but suffer and be strong.

NOTHING need be added to the dispatches from Washington describing the condition of the wounded President. His physicians are no longer confident, and their reticence confirms the worst fears. The patient has not rallied from the terrible depression of yesterday. He is growing weaker all the while and his pulse indicates that he is still being consumed. His constitutional dyspepsia makes it impossible for him to retain nourishment save that administered in an artificial way. We have no desire to alarm the public nor create a sensation, but it is our deliberate conviction that President GARFIELD is dying and that he is beyond the reach of science.

OUR forensic legal friend Mr. H. CLAY CONDE offers an excellent suggestion, in a communication published in another column, which, if carried out, will tend to decrease crime materially in St. Louis. It is simply that the law against carrying concealed weapons be mercilessly enforced. In Philadelphia the authorities are searching citizens—business men as well as hoodlums—and we do not remember to have heard of a homicide nor an assassination in that city since an embargo was laid upon perambulating arsenals. It is in the power of the police of St. Louis to close the hip-pocket here. If this were done and the keepers of such variety show dens as the "Canterbury" (now the Theater Comique) were treated as enemies of society the morals of St. Louis would be vastly improved. These variety shows are simply Schools for Murder. There are plenty of places of amusement in this city where young men can find entertainment and where they will neither be inflamed by drink, poisoned by tobacco nor corrupted by contact with vile women. No place of resort should be permitted in this city which maintains a wine-room—a cross between a low doggery and a bagnio. But for the Canterbury young Mr. PATSY EARLY would not now be languishing in a murderers' cell. No less than a dozen crimes, yet fresh in the memories of citizens, can be traced to the baneful influence of these so-called variety theaters. Let the Police Board commence a vigorous warfare against them at once.

A BAPTIST preacher named YEATTS has turned up at Witherspoon, Arkansas, with an account of the discovery of a mineral spring down on Greasy Creek, in that State, which simply removes the tatter from the shrubbery and knocks such places of resort as Saratoga into the everlasting limboes of void time. This new elixir flows from the side of a mountain 400 feet high. It looks like cider and is a most remarkable stimulant, exciting amatory feelings in human beings and filling their souls with undiluted ecstacy. Those who drink the water fall in love with everything in sight and go about hugging people without regard to age, color, smell or previous condition of servitude. People in that vicinity are realizing the profundity of the ancient Roman poet who predicted the season when

"He who loves not yet shall love,
And he who loved shall love again."

The parson said to a newspaper correspondent: "I never saw the like. Children and boys and girls hugging and kissing every one they meet. Old men and old women, young men and young ladies, embracing each other by hugging and kissing. I met an old white-haired man and woman—I suppose about 80 years old—and they were hopping and skipping like lambs. I saw hundreds lying around the spring so drunk that they could not stand up, and they were lying and laughing and trying to slap their hands." They call this fountain the "Millennium Springs." Our private opinion is that some moonshiner's still up on the mountain has "busted," and that this erotic pool is nothing but an ordinary limestone spring tinctured with apple-jack. We wouldn't advise a rush of people to that section whose hearts are yearning for love until the facts can be ascertained.

WHEN the distinguished actor JOHN MCCULLOUGH arrived in New York harbor yesterday he was met by a party of friends in a yacht and escorted to the city with royal honors. In the receiving crowd Mr. WM. J. FLORENCE, comedian (low), figured as conspicuously as a goat on a steep hillside. Mr. FLORENCE belongs to the class of actors who obtain the bulk of their advertising by the perpetration of what are known as practical jokes. After the late Mr. SOTHERN began to lose his mind he gave himself up almost exclusively to intellectual self-abuse of this kind and Mr. FLORENCE was his chief pupil. Practical joking consists of placing some innocent, confiding person in an embarrassing and annoying situation for the amusement of certain weak-minded people who have managed to elude the grasp of keepers of asylums for idiots, and about the only accomplishment necessary to make a man an adept in the business is a first-class knack of downright lying. Mr. FLORENCE is now so thoroughly addicted to what is known as joking that if he were to attend the funeral of a very dear friend he would think it a smart trick to slip a cigar into the mouth of the corpse or stick an old alarm-clock in the coffin, so arranged as to kick up a bobbery at the moment when the solemn preacher began to point his moral. This sort of playfulness would certainly be mentioned in the newspapers, and this is the motive that underlies Mr. FLORENCE'S friskiness and penchant for practical joking. Yesterday he got the laugh on Mr. MCCULLOUGH by inducing him to stand up and steer the yacht Corsair from Quarantine to the pier in New York by means of a supplemental wheel which was not attached to the tiller. A pilot in front did the steering, while the seafaring JOHN pulled and hauled at the bogus apparatus. Of course this was very funny. Still further amusement might have been created if, before landing, Mr. FLORENCE and his friends had painted the face of their victim or had tied a piece of paper to his coat tail before leading him through the streets. Next to a deadbeat a practical joker is the greatest nuisance that genteel society is forced to endure. MCCULLOUGH should take FLORENCE out yachting with him some day, and when about fifteen miles from shore be should tie a barrel of sand to his legs and drop him overboard—just by way of a joke.

THE sort of mental pabulum demanded by the rising generation in St. Louis is fairly shown by the condition of the news-stands. At any one of these it will be found that the largest sale is of the Police Gazette and Police News. After these periodicals the dime and nickel novels. Everything that is known to be rich and gamey will sell, while papers with any ragged remnants of decency still about them are left upon the shelves. Out of this mass of reading our youth acquire the idea that robbery, pillage and rapine, that lying and ornamental sneak-thievery are the brightest jewels in the diadem of American character. It is not alone the boys of the poorer classes that are tainted. The virus has spread through the public schools, and through almost every home in this city where there are boys. The young men exhibit considerable literary knowledge in knowing what they want. It is a common thing for a boy of twelve to go into a bookstore and ask for PAUL DE KOCK'S novels and the Heptameron of MARGARET OF ANJOU and the libraries all testify that there is a constant effort on the part of incomplete young men to get out such dangerous books as WYCHERLY'S or CONGREVE'S plays, or "The Golden Ass of Apuleus." The boys have the taste for reading thoroughly ingrafted in them, but unfortunately they assimilate nothing but poison. As a rule the parents do not know what the boys are reading. For all the average father or mother in this city knows BOHN'S edition of the Greek novelists is an eminently proper work for children to read, almost as good as ROLLINS' History. But the boys know what the novels are about and they read them for the dirt that is in them—nothing else. It would be exceedingly safe to bet that there is not a youth of 16 either in the high schools or the academies of St. Louis that could not, on demand, prepare a more thorough and copious list of objectionable books than his teachers. This disease of bad reading is epidemic chiefly because parents ignorantly encourage a thirst for reading and then fail to provide wholesome material to satisfy it. If there were more such books as "Tom Brown" good books would be read, but they are the exception, not the rule. Equipped thoroughly in the theory of crime our boys find the practice on the streets, and it is no wonder that they come of age criminal proficients. The wine-room of a low theatre is just where one would expect to find an ordinarily educated St. Louis boy, and it is only a step from there to the murderers' row at the Four Courts.

WE have received through the mail the following note:

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

At a little social gathering held up here last evening, where all were warm friends of the POST-DISPATCH, a dispute arose over the Alabama claims. "Have those claims been settled?" was the question, and I am instructed to ask you, sir, as a special favor, to enlighted us on the subject.

Respectfully, O'NEILL.

No. 2727 Laclede avenue.

What are known as the "Alabama Claims" were settled by the Geneva Board of Arbitrators in 1871, the Government of Great Britain awarding the United States the sum of $15,500,000 to be used in indemnifying Insurance companies, ship-owners and shippers for actual losses sustained at the hands of the Confederate cruisers, the Alabama, Florida and Shenandoah. This money was turned over to our Government and a portion of it was disbursed to claimants. A dispute arose relating to the distribution of about $9,000,000 of the fund. The Marine Insurance companies that paid the losses on the ships and cargoes that were destroyed were entitled to the money, according to the award, but a lot of New England statesmen of the BEN BUTLER, FRY and CRAPO order set up the plea that the Insurance companies had made money during the war and that this balance of the Geneva Award Fund should be divided among the Yankee shippers, who were forced to pay high rates of insurance while the Confederate cruisers were on the seas. These were styled "the war premium men." Congress, unmindful of the fact that these shippers charged every additional dollar of insurance into the cargoes which they sold during the war and were, therefore, thoroughly reimbursed, has actually entertained bills for ten years that were designed to divert this fund from the people to whom it was originally awarded. The money in the Treasury now amounts to about $10,800,000. After it has been wrangled over a while longer the Government will steal it and put it in its own pocket, as it has every fund that it ever yet held as a sacred trust. The Government of the United States is a stupendous thief when it comes to dealing with its own citizens, and the immorality which it inculcates is beautifully reflected when the people have a chance to steal from the public treasury.

IF the active borrowing of money is any indication of mercantile and manufacturing activity, St. Louis has never been so busy in midsummer as it is to-day.—Republican.

As an active borrower our neighbor can always be depended on to keep the public advised as to the condition of this peculiar branch of the money market.

PERSONAL.

—At last accounts Dr. James Gordon Bennett, of the New York Herald, was doing as well as could be expected.

—It is rumored that Gov. Plaisted, of Maine, will be married in October. He is making extensive repairs in his house in Bangor.

—Mrs. Edgar Johnson, of Cincinnati, wears a pair of $5,000 earrings. It is hardly necessary to say that Mr. Johnson is a probate lawyer.

—Yum Yum, a young Chinaman from Boston, drowned himself in the Neponset River, from home-sickness. It was not a case of yum yum.

—Ex-Senator Wallace, of Pennsylvania, has retired from the practice of law as well as from politics, to devote himself to his bituminous coal interests. His intellect is beautifully shaped for the coal trade.

—Mrs. Walter Campbell, of New York, has sued her husband for $5,000 worth of railroad bonds of hers, which she says he has stolen. In reply, he denies the theft, but charges his wife with stealing his money. The amiable couple are both a little past there three score years and ten.

—The Countess Brownlow tells that Castlereagh could write or study in the midst of drawing-room clatter. But Earl Russell says that Castlereagh once spoke for an hour without conveying the least idea of what he was driving at, and then calmly added: "Such, Mr. Speaker, is the law of nations."

—The two wealthiest widows in England are the Hon. Mrs. Meynell-Ingram, daughter of Lord Halifax, and Mrs. Gerard Leigh. The first inherited from her husband two splendid seats, each with a deer park, and an income of about $150,000 a year. Mrs. Gerard Leigh, who sails in the finest steam yacht afloat, owns Luton Park, formerly the seat of the Bute family, and a fine house in Grosvenor Square, London. She entertains liberally, whereas Mrs. Meynell-Ingram lives quietly.

A Woman's Plea for a Woman.

ST. LOUIS, August 14, 1881.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Your valuable paper comes to my door every evening, and is always welcomed—even as I hail the coming of a cherished friend. In looking over the paper a few days since I was greatly shocked to learn the sad fate of Mr. Prettyman, who was murdered. Mrs. Prettyman is a lady—a deserving lady in every respect. She has known better, happier days. Of late years fortune has frowned on her. She has been taking boarders. Perhaps the location did not suit her exactly, but she had not the means to move into more desirable quarters, and was compelled to remain where she was in order to keep her head above the waves. And now when her heart is almost crushed with trouble, slander is ready to add to her sorrows. Do you think, Mr. Editor, this is charity? Into her saddened heart the rain has fallen heavily. She is left desolate and alone, a poor widow dependent upon her exertions for a support for herself and orphan children. I know you, Mr. Editor, to be a generous, honorable gentleman and feel assured that you will agree with me in what I say. If Mrs. Prettyman had been left a widow in affluence perhaps she would have had many wealthy sympathizers who would have gladly cared for the widow and orphans, but as she is left a lady of misfortune and poverty will our charitable city leave her neglected and alone in this great bereavement and not assist her in her darkest hours of adversity?

Don't you think in all this great city, that some of our charitable citizens will raise a fund for this deserving lady, Mrs. Prettyman? I feel assured that she and her orphans will not be left desolate, and sincerely hope that heaven will raise friends for this heart-broken widow. A SUBSCRIBER.

Concealed Weapons and Crime.

ST. LOUIS, August 15.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I have noticed your earnest efforts to have the laws against the high crime of murder executed in our city. That crime is fast becoming what the medical fraternity would call chronic, since it seems impossible to enforce that law. Is it not possible for the powers that be to enforce the laws against carrying concealed deadly weapons? It seems to me if we could enforce the latter law it would lessen the death rate materially in our fair city, and, upon the principle that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, keep our city from becoming a by-word and a reproach in all other places where these self same laws exist and are enforced. This latter relic of barbarism ought to cease in all civilized communities. Very respectfully,

H. CLAY CONDE.

Oleaginous Statistical Humor.

From this Morning's Republican.

The export of crude petroleum for the twelve months ended June, 1881, was 39,984,844 gallons, against 28,297,997 in 1880. The value of the export in 1881 was $40,315,596, against $36,218,625 in 1880; an increase of $4,097,971 in the year.

An Excellent Suggestion.

From the Sedalia Call.

Not failing to observe the eternal fitness of things, and recognizing that while Sedalia is getting so many things, Jefferson City ought to have something adapted to her easy-going style, we would suggest the propriety of removing the St. Louis Republican to that ancient burg. It might improve the Republican some, and it could not hurt Jeff. much.

A Base Fabrication.

From the Chicago Tribune.

The young lady who gave Mr. Amweg so much trouble in St. Louis was only a newspaper "belle." Society in St. Louis has not proclaimed her belledom. The story that she was ever engaged to Samuel J. Tilden was a ridiculous yarn, not invented by him. He never had the honor of her acquaintance.

Good Enough for Preachers.

From the Washington Critic.

An important compromise has been effected in Ohio between the drink and anti-drink factions of the radical party. Ministers are to be allowed to quaff birch beer. This hasn't much bark on, but we infer it will do for preachers.

A Fruitful Senator.

From the Kansas City Times.

Senator Ingalls now dandles his tenth baby. Mr. Ingalls is a diminutive man from a senatorial standpoint, but justice demands the confession that as a colonizer he is a glowing success.

THE TALL SYCAMORE.

Senator Dan Voorhees, of Indiana, Discourses on Politics.

His Views on Conkling, the Presidency, Garfield's Condition and Democratic Prospects.

United States Senator Daniel W. Voorhees, of Indiana, arrived this morning, and is registered at the Southern. The "Tall Sycamore" is accompanied by Mr. E. P. Beauchamp, of Terre Haute, ex-Consul to Aix-la-Chapelle, and at present editor of the Terre Haute Saturday Night. The gentlemen will remain in St. Louis several days attending to private business. Senator Voorhees was met by a POST-DISPATCH reporter this morning, who found him in his usually affable mood and perfectly willing to express his opinion about anything upon which he considered himself entitled to talk.

He was just reading the morning papers in regard to President Garfield's condition, about which he expressed the utmost interest. "I am distressed to death," said he. "I see that the President's condition to-day is very unfavorable, and I think that this is a cause for universal sorrow and distress. I look upon Garfield's death as a most unmitigated misfortune, a calamity to himself, his family, and to the country generally. I do not mention the misfortune to his party, because any misfortune to the Republicans would be a blessing to the country. The circumstances that must follow his death would be deplorable, and it must be a source of grief and pain to any man who contemplates them to see that one weak and almost exhausted life is all that can forestall them."

"You do not look forward to Arthur's Presidency with much hopefulness?" he was asked.

"No, indeed, I do not. I regard it with great distrust and I hope that no such misfortune will occur. It would be most unfortunate for the country generally."

"In what way?"

"Well, I hardly care to discuss this matter. I have spoken a great deal about it and I am still of the same mind. In the first place, I know that Arthur is a man utterly incapable of fulfilling the duties of the office properly. In the second place, I know that he is in the hands of a faction who will do all in their power to control him and swerve him towards their ends and purposes. Thirdly, I know that he is a man who could be controlled without difficulty."

"You look upon his Presidency, then, as a national misfortune?"

"Oh, it would be very bad, very bad. I hope it may be averted. We cannot afford to have Conkling at the head of affairs, which would be what it would amount to. Mr. Arthur is not the man for the place. His friends, who will become his advisers, are not the proper men to control this nation. The result would be deplorable."

"What about Conkling's future?"

"If Conkling will begin to have some common sense and act upon its dictates there is no reason why he should be retired from public life. He is possessed with an overweening opinion of his own importance, and until he learns to drop this he will not be successful. His late lesson does not seem to benefit him, and his probable chance to control affairs growing out of this dastardly crime is to be deplored under the circumstances."

"Do you share the opinion that the chances of the Democratic party for success in the national election are about over?"

"Indeed I do not! I never thought so. The last election was lost to us by an unfortunate blunder in Indiana and a still more unfortunate blunder in New York. I do not think these things will occur again, and it is manifest that the Republicans are now as badly split as the Democratic party ever was."

"Would not Arthur's presidency heal this little rupture?"

"No. It would only intensify it. It would widen the breach to such an extent that Republican success would be absolutely impossible three years from now. This opening is predicated on the supposition that the present tactics would be pursued and the policy now outlined would be carried out."

"Then you are hopeful of national success for the Democrats in 1884?"

"I am, very much so. There is no reason for discouragement. The Republicans beat us last time because we were divided, and now they are much worse off in this respect than we are, and they show few signs, or none at all, of bettering their condition."

"Who will be the probable candidate next time. Will it be Hancock?"

"There is considerable probability that it will. The indications seems to point that way, and it is certain that he will be well received. He made a first-class race, and will do so again."

"Will Indiana be on the right side next time?"

"It will. I am positive of that. Our unfortunate mistake will not be repeated."

"How about the Vice-Presidency?"

"Well, Indiana does not want it again. We did not want it last time, but it was forced upon us."

"How about yourself?"

"Oh, I am not presidential timber," replied the Senator, with a slight smile. "I have four years in the Senate still, and I am satisfied with it. It is hard to say who will be the tail of the ticket, but Indiana does not want the honor."

"How are politics in Indiana at present?"

"Very quiet. In fact, there is nothing doing. We have had no elections lately and there is no excitement or no way of indicating the public sentiment. The absorbing topic at present is the crops, and they are in a deplorable condition. As I came along on my journey I noticed particularly that the corn fields were all burnt up. The rich fields about Indianapolis and along the line will scarcely average five bushels to the acre. Then these sharks at Chicago are making grain corners and forcing breadstuffs away up. I tell you it is a shame. There is urgent need for a law which would effectually crush out corners in grain, pork and breadstuffs generally. This must be stopped in some way."

Senator Voorhees will remain in town a couple of days. He is looking very well and is not at all changed since he visited St. Louis during the Democratic Convention in 1876. There are no signs of silver threads among his hairs, and he seems to be in the same stalwart condition as when he filled the District Court with his stentorian voice during the whisky trials in this city.

IN MURDERERS' ROW.

Where Early and His Companions Find Themselves.

Ex-Officer Wolf and the four boys—Early, the Zachritzes and Miller—are now inmates of the Murderers' Row in the jail. Their names are included in one warrant charging murder in the first degree. The police say this course was taken to hold Wolf, the Zachritzes and Miller as witnesses until their testimony can be taken at the preliminary examination in the Court of Criminal Correction. Early occupies the cell with Rickard, who shot his landlady at a boarding-house on Chestnut. Ex-Officer Wolf and Miller are cell-mates. One of the Zachritz boys is with Anslinger, and the other with Erb the wife murderer. The friends of all but Early have been given to understand that the prisoners are only to be used as witnesses and hence manifest little interest in them. Indeed there is nothing that can be done until the preliminary examination when the Prosecuting Attorney will move to have all but Early put under bond as witnesses and discharged after their testimony is taken. The Early family, however, are in sore trouble. Patsy's father came to the Four Courts this morning and saw the boy. During his visit he said that he didn't know what he was going to do about his son's case; he was too poor to employ counsel for the defense. Later in the day Early saw John I. Martin, and that gentleman gave out that he and Mr. Fauntleroy had been paid a retaining fee of $500 to take care of Patsy. There has been much talk about the liability of the boy in case of conviction. It may be definitely stated that there is no saving exception on account of age to prevent him from being hung if he is convicted of murder in the first degree. Such a result of the trial is hardly anticipated, however, in view of the facts of a previous quarrel between the parties and blows given by Louderman. The friends of the dead man have engaged Gov. Chas. P. Johnson to assist the State in the prosecution.

THE PRETTYMAN CASE.

What Curry's Counsel Hopes to Do This Afternoon.

Witnesses and counsel in the case of Chas. W. Curry, the young painter accused of killing Nathaniel W. Prettyman on Pine street last Monday night, are waiting in the Court of Criminal Correction to-day in anticipation of the preliminary examination. Mr. MacManus, who appears for Curry, will ask for immediate hearing, and will present the defense with a view to obtaining the discharge of the prisoner without further proceedings. The defense will be that Prettyman's death was due to his bad habits rather than to the injury sustained. Witnesses are expected to testify that there was no kicking or stamping done by Curry after Prettyman was down. It is the purpose to establish that Prettyman was thrown or pushed down in self-defense, and that the wound on the dead man's head was a single contusion caused by the fall.

ABOUT TOWN.

JUSTICE P. J. TAAFFE tried twenty-nine case of disturbing the peace in the Second District Police Court to-day.

THE Knights of Father Mathew are still organizing subordinate councils. St. Malachi was organized on Sunday and Annunciation on last evening.

THE remains of Leo De Smet Benoist, the youth of seventeen who died of consumption at Lake Minnetonka, arrived here this morning in a metallic casket.

JOHN SMITH and Tim Donnelly disagreed over drinks in a saloon on Fifth and Chestnut this morning, and Donnelly drew a knife-blade across Smith's chest, cutting quite a gash.

DAN LINAHAN, the bookseller of Fourth and Washington avenue, presented Eugene B. Cronin, secretary of the Cote Brilliante Land League, with a handsomely bound set of books to be raffled next month for the benefit of the League.

THE annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Sciences will take place on the 17th at Cincinnati. Dr. Comstock and lady departed this morning to attend the meeting, and from thence will go East to Saratoga and the sea-shore, to be absent until October.

THERE will be a meeting of Canadians to-night at Ecker & Watts' to make plans for Hanlan's reception. On Saturday afternoon the Modoc double, rowed by Allen and Taylor, will go over the course with Hanlan, and on Sunday afternoon the senior four-oared crew will do the same.

A ONE-LEGGED tramp was caught prowling around the house of a lone widow on Tenth and Spruce last night, and when she wanted to know his business he insisted on having some information about his mother-in-law. His excessive interest in the family connection cost him a ten-dollar fine in the Police Court.

OFFICER KICKER has reported the case of Michael Stecklein to the Third District Station. Stecklein, who is a German and 63 years old, lives at 813 Wash street, where he has been prostrated with liver complaint for the past four months. His wife, who is 60 years old, is unable to support him, and he has asked assistance from the city.

JOHNNY SMITH was before the Police Court this morning on triple charges. He went into a saloon at Seventh and Elm streets the other day and bored a hole through the floor with his pistol. The saloonkeeper had him arrested, and after getting bail Smith went back and abused the prosecutor roundly for making such a fuss about a little harmless sport.

THERE was a reminiscence of the Decatur street war in the Police Court this morning. The docket was encumbered with charges against the Union Depot Railroad Company and Contractor Fruin for obstructing the street. Ex-Aldermen Tom Morris and Adolph Fisher appeared and explained that the difficulties had been harmoniously adjusted, and the City Attorney dismissed the complaints.

CITY PERSONALS.

The family of Mr. Peter O'Neill returned from the North this morning. Mr. O'Neill came back a few days ago.

Capt. Henry Parker, of the Mississippi's champion four, will give his new boat, American Girl, another trial trip next Sunday afternoon, leaving the foot of Ferry street, and going to Chouteau slough and return.

CATTLE—Supply moderate and altogether of grass Texans from common to good. The attendance of the different classes of buyers was fair, but they all held back and wanted concessions which made the market somewhat slow the fore part of the day. By 10 a. m. interior shippers and buyers of the canning companies, commenced operations at prices 5@10c per 100 ℔s lower than those prevailing on yesterday. In fact yesterday's advance was entirely lost. Stock and feeding steers were dull and unchanged. Common and medium mixed butchers' stuff in fair supply and dull. Native steers, none offered, that is good ones, and were wanted mighty badly. Half fat or unmatured steers of 800 to 1,050 ℔s dull. Veal calves scarce. Ruling quotations quiet.

PROFESSIONAL BEGGING.

How the Charitable are Imposed Upon Daily.

Some of the Devices of the Beggars—How the System Should be Rooted Out.

The professional begging nuisance is again manifesting itself in a manner that calls for some vigilant and rigorous police interference. Complaints of gross impositions daily practiced among men and women of generous impulse reach the office of the POST-DISPATCH from all quarters of the city, and the report is generally accompanied with an expression of indignation on the part of the victim. Appeals and remonstrances to the Police Board appear to have little effect. The nuisance is unabated, and no effort is made to suppress it. A POST-DISPATCH reporter's attention was called the other day to a case of systematic fraud practiced on a large business house down town, and a subsequent investigation led to some remarkable developments in the down-town begging business.

Manager Specht of the Famous Clothing Company was waited upon a few mornings since by a little girl about 12 years of age, poorly clad and assuming an air of misery. The child told Mr. Specht with a handkerchief to her eyes that she had been requested to call and solicit his aid in behalf of her mother, who worked at a restaurant on Fifth street but who had met with an accident, fracturing her arm, and she was lying sick at home, with a month's rent in arrears and a family of small children starving around her bed.

THE LITTLE PROFESSIONAL.

played her part with consummate skill, and she almost succeeded with such a pitiful recital in drawing the desired coin from the good-hearted merchant's pocket. But Mr. Specht is a man of keen perceptive qualities, and he determined to apply a rule of business to this appeal before granting it. A young man in the establishment was detailed to investigate and report, accompanying the girl for that purpose. Before the second corner was turned the young adept in the begging art was seized with a sudden desire to go up an alley and see some laundress. She said that an overdraft of watermelon had incommoded her to such an extent that she could not proceed any further. The amateur detective frightened her into a confession that it was merely an excuse to evade him; that the investigation could not be extended any further and that she would be whipped within an inch of her life if she took anybody to her home to make inquiries. "You might get a head put on you, too, if you follow me," ominously suggested this young confidence operator. "I was only playing a stiff on the man and it did not work. I have not made enough to-day to stand treat, but will set you some other time. Ta ta!" and the girl, with a smile and sauntered off in the opposite direction. That investigation was pursued, however, in spite of the threat. It resulted in the submission of the following report:

A COOL ASSURANCE.

Mr. Specht:

SIR—I find that the girl in question has both father and mother living. The father is working on the new Sixth street car line. His name is Dennis Hearley. The mother goes by the name of Lizzie Reilly, and is recorded on the books of the police department as a professional beggar. In the streets she wears a dark veil, dark calico dress, and generally carries a child two years and a half old in her arms. The girl appears on the corners wearing a straw hat and a blue check apron. Respectfully,

THOS. JONES.

The above is a fair sample of the professional begging line, in which quite an extensive business is carried on in this city. It is the custom of the professionals to work the sympathy dodge as far as it will go, and a woman will never set out on

A BEGGING MISSION

without bearing in her arms a sickly child, and perhaps another holding to her skirts. The rounds down town are made systematically, commencing in the morning with the counting-rooms of the large business houses, extending during the day to the stores and offices in the best frequented thoroughfares, and winding up the work in the afternoon hours at the down-town corners. Young girls from 10 to 14 years of age are attractive beggars, and they are usually sent to work the public departments and promenade quarters of town. Occasionally they are furnished with something to sell, matches or flowers, but the greater number are sent out to beg direct, and a return with a meager showing is acknowledged with an unmerciful whipping. The dread of this prompts extraordinary effort in every direction on the part of the child. Every man down town is visited and every person on the sidewalk accosted for a nickel or dime. One female conducting a juvenile begging business has made sufficient money to pay for a tenement building in the neighborhood of Sixth and Carr streets, and she resides in the rear portion herself, holding half a dozen little girls by rod control to a systematic begging operation of the center of the town. Her plans are well defined. The girls are distributed over the city in such a way that a fresh face is presented each day in different localities. A list is kept by this woman of all persons and places mentioned by the girls as "soft," and it serves as a valuable reference when particular homes have to be worked. The children are orphans skillfully trained to the business; they are furnished with bed and board, and when they get old enough to attract attention the old wretch living upon their street earnings dresses them up and they are sent forth as bait for an unnatural gratification, and eventually the girls drift into houses of ill-fame, where another premium is demanded for a fresh juvenile accession to the ranks of the fallen sisterhood. A shocking story was told a reporter by one of the frail order, who in the streets selling fruit and matches. It was in substance as follows: "I was three years ago living with two other girls at Mother S——'s up on Carr street. We were sent out every day with fruit or matches and sometimes button-holes. If it was a fine day I would take home $3 from my flower-basket, and when it was wet I had to stay around the theater entrances and saloons until I had disposed of my last button-hole. It happened occasionally that I could not sell out, and when I got home to Mother S——, you can just best that I smarted for it. She had a little back-room upstairs, where she always whipped the girls. There was a bench shaped like a pony with straps to it, and after throwing us across it she tied our feet and pulled our clothes up over our heads, fastened with a strap. Then she went to work with a birch rod, and sometimes a whip. I have been whipped by that old wretch so that I could not stand up, and she has left me strapped to the pony all night."

COMMENCED HER CAREER

A Fourth street merchant, commenting yesterday upon the intolerable nuisance of professional begging among both juveniles and adults, said: "There is only one way to handle this thing.

THE POLICE

should have instructions to run in every man, woman and child they find on the streets soliciting charity. Then each case should be referred to some such society established on the principles as the Charity Organization Society of London. The matter should be investigated and reported to the police department. If the applicant is worthy and in need of relief it is granted; if otherwise, the choice of Poor-house or Work-house is offered. That would have the effect of clearing the streets. It had that effect in Chicago, where arrests were promptly made and the choice of Poor-house or the Bridewell extended. Professional begging needs a sharp throttling measure, and the Police Board should look to it."

AMUSEMENTS.

UHRIG'S CAVE.

The engagement of Mattie Vickers and company at the Garden Theater proves satisfactory to the management and the public. There was an appreciative audience at the Cave last evening, and the excellent sketch work of Mattie Vickers and Chas. S. Rogers, supported by a good company, was received with renewed marks of favor. The bill for the week will be a one-act farce, "Love in Livery," and a prolonged bagatelle under the title of "The Players." On Sunday a new play will be presented.

THE NATATORIUM.

An increasing daily attendance at the Natatorium and Swimming School, Nineteenth and Pine streets, indicates the popularity of the institution. The arrangements are excellent and the conduct of the establishment commends it to the patronage of the public.

No Costiveness, Diarrhœa or any Bowel complaints where Hop Bitters are used.

A CAR-DRIVER'S ROMANCE.

Brought Into the Police Court by the Woman He Wooed.

The troubles of the Quinns were aired in the Police Court this morning. Matt was a driver on the Chouteau Avenue Line and used to pass on every trip the house of Ella Willard, a dark-haired, black-eyed woman whose home was at 1601 Gratiot. They flirted and they married, a Morgan street clergyman whose name Matt had forgotten performing the ceremony. This was last November. The man had a good situation and the woman some money to start matrimonial life with. A difference of opinion arose as to the time a car-driver should get home o' nights, and Mrs. Quinn, according to the husband, made her appearance at the car stables on several occasions to revise the time-table. Her violent interference became so distasteful to the street railroad managers that Quinn was discharged first from the Chouteau avenue line and then from the Cass avenue road.

Mrs. Quinn, who is known variously as Mrs. Williams, Mrs. Willard and Mrs. Wilson, went to keeping a house at 105 North Tenth street, where "furnished rooms" can be obtained by all sorts of people, and the ex-driver of a bob-tail lived there. Last night the matrimonial differences culminated in a rough and tumble fight, in which bad words were bandied, pitchers thrown and finger nails used vigorously. The woman showed the Judge a badly bruised throat, and the man exhibited an assortment of scratches. An inmate of the house rejoicing in the alliterative name of Della Dayton gave a version of the affair which favored Mrs. Quinn, and a fine of $50 was imposed on the man.

The Man Who Runs the Hill.

Jacob Johnson, a burly negro, took possession of Compton Hill last night and in a loud voice proclaimed his intention to "run the hill." He took his position in front of Commodore Decatur' church, shouted at the top of his voice that the venerable expounder was a liar, and told the people to get and go home. Officer Todd came along and endeavored to curb the bully, but his tongue went faster than ever. In the interest of law and order, the Compton Hill people came to Todd's assistance and furnished a vehicle in which the prisoner was taken to the station. This morning Johnson was fined $10 by Judge Jecko.

"TIBBLES, OF OMAHA."

A Chapter in the History of an Eccentric Character.

The Champion of the Poncas Once a Detective in St. Louis.

His Work in Solving the Mystery of the Murder of Mrs. Newbold.

"Tibbles of Omaha" has distinguished himself again. He is the enthusiast who espoused the cause of that branch of the Lo family known as the Poncas. As a sentimental champion he waged a newspaper and a platform war on Secretary Schurz's policy during the Hayes Administration, and later wrote a novel with the wrongs of the red man for a moral. A year ago, "Bright Eyes," the daughter of "Iron Eye," the chief of the Poncas, was introduced upon the lyceum stage, Tibbles appearing in the role of manager. The other day the news came from Omaha that the Ponca maiden had rewarded the advocate of her people's rights with her hand.

Few men have a wider range of personal acquaintances than "Tibbles of Omaha." A widower of forty-five, looking back on his eccentric life, he must have felt the need of something as novel as a Ponca partnership to furnish fresh experience.

Tibbles' face was once familiar in St. Louis, and there are some of the "old-timers" around police headquarters who remember him. He had just stepped down from the pulpit and had

BECOME A DETECTIVE

—queer transition of vocation that was surely. It did not strike Tibbles, however, that the change necessitated any revolution in personal appearance and so he went about in his suit of clerical black, as good a disguise as ever was donned for secret service. He was a sort of standing joke at police headquarters for a while but worked on persistently until he interested policeman and reporters in his revelations and everybody tried to help him. It is true Tibbles didn't solve completetly the horrible mystery he was working with, but he developed enough to make tolerably certain the fate of Mrs. J. H. Newbold, and to drive from the city for good the notorious abortionist, Doctress Downs.

It was in Fair week, 1872, that Mrs. Newbold, a lady of considerable means, whose home was in Carrollton, Mo., came to St. Louis in company with a sister, Mrs. Beach, seeking treatment for a complaint peculiar to the sex.

The sick lady had been living in Iowa, where her family connections were of the best. She was a widow, her husband, Colonel of an Iowa regiment, having been killed in battle near Shreveport. A brother-in-law was Gov. Newbold of Iowa. When the two ladies reached St. Louis they found the city full of people and the hotel accommodations overtaxed. What evil genius directed Mrs. Newbold to could never be explained. Mrs. Newbold was a woman of thirty-seven, worth some thousands of dollars. She was a member of the Methodist Church, and the breath of scandal had never touched her good name. After the two ladies reached the city Mrs. Newbold told her sister that she was going to Mrs. Downs to board and to be treated, and directed that her baggage be sent there. They parted, and Mrs. Beach returned to Carrollton with the promise of being informed speedily how the case progressed. From that day Mrs. Newbold was never seen by her friends, nor was any trace ever found of her baggage. She had between $700 and $800 with her when she parted with her sister. Naturally the lady's relatives soon instituted inquiries, and the St. Louis police bent their energies toward discovering the supposed crime. Doctress Downs contented herself with flatly denying that she had ever seen or heard of such a woman as Mrs. Newbold, and there the case rested when Tibbles came upon the scene. He had been

A COUNTRY PREACHER,

and Mrs. Newbold had been an attendant upon his ministrations at one time. A peculiar aptitude for almost anything enabled him to turn detective without any feeling of incongruity, and he commenced working for clues with a thoroughness from which professionals might have learned a lesson. A search of every institution in and about St. Louis was followed by a study of mortuary and other registers. This line exhausted, Tibbles went among the demi-monde and scattered the pictures of the missing woman with promises of large rewards for news of her. Preacher though he had been, Tibbles was wise in the ways of the world. It is said that he had every questionable house in St. Louis canvassed before he abandoned this unpleasant possibility. Then he hobnobbed with hackmen, passenger agents, runners for boats, depot officials, showing everywhere his pictures and the description of the missing lady. When all these lines of work failed the detective and hung on the trail of the doctress day and night. Wherever the abortionist went, the man in rusty black and with innocent, absorbed countenance was in the vicinity. She sat in the Missouri Park in the evening occasionally, and there Tibbles was stretched on the grass behind a bush. Not only the woman, but those who came to and went from her well-furnished and unobtrusive den on Locust street were brought under Tibbles' surveillance. It occurred to him that too many women who seemed to have business with the Doctress left by the Iron Mountain Railroad. One day Tibbles followed and paid his fare from station to station until he reached Kimmswick, where the object of his attention left the car.

TURNED SHADOW,

There Tibbles lingered until he had developed the fact that the doctress had a large country establishment where she sent some of her patients to be treated on the quiet. It was an important attachment for the character of the doctress' peculiar profession. Tibbles set about the suburban investigations quietly, and he soon reached the conclusion that some of the unfortunate women who came there never went away. Clues picked up at Kimmswick led Tibbles to who had a little shop near Union Market and whose name was Wieppert. The subject of the doctress and her mysterious ways was broached and Wieppert's tongue was loosened. He had been a former husband of the abortionist and had lived long enough with her to learn her nefarious ways. According to his story she had practiced her murderous profession in New Orleans, Mobile and other cities before coming to St. Louis and was well versed in expedients for disposing of her victims. Wieppert had been driven from the Kimmswick place, and he showed Tibbles the scars on his head inflicted by the man who had supplanted him in the consideration of the doctress. To get hold of this man, none other than Downs, whose name Mrs. Newbold had taken, was Tibbles' next work. He found him, and, inducing Wieppert to swear to a warrant for deadly assault, the detective soon had the satisfaction to see his man transferred to the Hillsboro jail. Some things are possible in a retired country town which might not be accomplished in the city. Downs was reticent and professed ignorance of the doings of the doctress, but Tibbles was equal to the emergency. The prisoner was suffering from lung complaint, and could not sleep. Medicine was furnished by the detective and administered by the jailer. Two hours later Downs was while the detective stood hidden in a corner taking down the ravings. Tibbles was a stenographer as well as preacher and pretty much everything else. When he had transcribed his notes the day following he had numerous scraps of confession which read like this, the questions being put by Downs' fellow-prisoner, a boy, in for theft.

RAVING IN DELIRIUM,

"I never done it! I never done it!" Downs would scream, as he writhed on his bed.

"Never done what!" the boy would ask.

Downs—I never done it! Jack and Lize (Mrs. Downs) done it. I had nothing to do with it. I told them not to do it.

Prisoner—What in thunder are you talking about?

Downs—Oh, my God! that woman.

Prisoner—What woman?

Downs—Mrs. Newbold. She would do it. She said there was over $700 in it. But it's all right. They won't find her. Jack fixed it all right.

Prisoner—Jack who?

Downs—Jack Slaughter. D—n the nigger!

Prisoner—What did Jack do?

Downs—Oh, he put her in the slough by the Pacific depot.

Prisoner—The h—l you say? Was she alive?

Downs—No, no. Lize fixed her and Jack put her in the depot. They'll never find her.

So it went on until the effects of the medicine began to fail Downs repeating in various forms the information given. He knew that there had been a search for Mrs. Newbold for he as well as Mrs. Downs had been closely questioned by the police. Furthermore there closed in on the mysterious hospital at Kimmswick one morning a party of searchers from St. Louis. It included detectives, grave-diggers and reporters. The Downs country-seat was ransacked and the hunted for assiduously, but in vain. One of Tibbles' clues had furnished him the information that a woman answering Mrs. Newbold's description and having baggage like hers had taken passage on the Iron Mountain Railroad about the time of the disappearance. This search of the Kimmswick place had occurred long before the incarceration of Downs at Hillsboro, and he had the fact that Mrs. Newbold was being looked for well impressed on his mind; hence his talkativeness in delirium. With the jail revelations Tibbles turned back to St. Louis and explained the state of things to the police. McDonough was Chief, and, recognizing the importance of the developments, he put the detectives, who were then in charge of Harrigan, at work with a will. Nothing to correspond with Downs' reference to the slough near the Pacific Depot could be thought of except Mill Creek sewer, City Engineer Moulton, after reference to his records, declared that for some time during the month in which Mrs. Newbold disappeared there had been a bad break in the sewer near the depot. Spurred by the promise of reward, the sewer men made an immediate search of the subterranean thoroughfare from mouth to break, but no corpus delicti was revealed. There had been storms between the date of disappearance and the search sufficient to have carried the remains into the river.

SUPPOSED PRIVATE GRAVEYARD

SLAUGHTER.

Then Tibbles bethought him of Slaughter, the negro, and without much difficulty the police located him in a low down neighborhood near the Third District Police Station; but when they inquired for him it was only to learn that he had gone off suddenly "down de ribber somewhar."

Downs, after recovering from the drugs, became as reticent as ever. Tibbles and the police were satisfied that they had solved the mystery of Mrs. Newbold's disappearance, but the evidence on which to base a charge of murder was wanting. The detective lingered some time longer, becoming more and more convinced that Mrs. Newbold had been murdered by the doctress and her body flung into the sewer by the negro. Downs got out of Hillsboro jail and disappeared. No trace could be found of the negro, and the doctress suddenly departed. Exit also Tibbles, and the murder of Mrs. Newbold stands among the unpunished crimes of St. Louis.

In accordance with the following offer made June 24, we are now ready to name the winners and give the prizes.

Following is the offer we made:

Copyrighted January 12, 1881.

PUZZLE OF 100.

Try it! It's so Easy!

THE WM. BARR DRY GOODS CO., OF ST. LOUIS,

Will give a black silk dress to the first lady who sends them a correct answer before August the 15th, or one dozen of kid gloves to the first gentleman, providing they are residents of Missouri, Illinois, Kansas, Arkansas, Iowa or Texas.

By the simple rule of addition add the ten characters—1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 0, together, and make 100. You can transpose the figures any way you like, but the ten characters must appear, and not more than once—that is, the figure of 1, or 2, or 3, etc., can be used only once in the sum. For example:

1	2	25
2	10	34
3	34	9
4	5	10

DENT'S DEER CLUB.

A Drinking Coterie of Old St. Louisans.

How Grant's Father-in-Law and His Pals Took Their Bourbon and Tobacco.

The following quaint document, dating back to 1843, in the possession of Mr. Chartrand, of the Recorder's office, throws light upon the old-time amusements of the Dent circle, ex-President Grant's relatives by marriage. A coterie of old St. Louisans, in which Gen. Grant's father-in-law and Judge Long were conspicuous figures assembled at Dent's farm on the Gravois Road and drew up these articles:

1. The society to be known as the Gravois Hunting Club.

2. The company shall consist of such commissioned and non-commissioned officers as prescribed by other hunting societies, unless a majority deem it necessary to alter them.

3. It shall be the duty of the president to appoint the necessary number of officers, who shall hold their offices until December 25, 1844, when there shall be a general election.

4. Persons failing to attend either a meeting of the club or a drive, after being notified, shall pay for the benefit of the company one quart of whisky.

5. Any member who shall shoot at a deer at the distance of sixty yards or less, without killing, shall pay half a gallon. If he fails to draw blood he shall pay one gallon, and if he neglects to shoot when within sixty yards he shall pay not more than two gallons, at the discretion of the company.

6. No person shall read a newspaper on his stand under a penalty of one quart, and in case of such fine it shall be placed to the credit of the driver.

7. Any person going to sleep on or near a stand shall forfeit one quart, and if he shall snore so loud as to be heard 100 yards he shall pay one gallon to the driver.

8. Any member who shall fail to feed a dog belonging to the club when it is in his power to do so shall forfeit half a gallon for each dog, to be credited to the dog's master.

9. Any member who shall sit by the fire for more than half an hour without telling a deer story or calling for a horn shall forfeit one quart.

10. No member is allowed to get so drunk after a drive as to require four persons to carry him to bed, under a penalty of one gallon.

11. The members who go to bed with their boots on shall pay for the benefit of the landlord one-quarter of venison.

12. Any member who shall refuse to take a slice of good venison when invited shall forfeit one gallon for the benefit of the club.

13. Any member getting so drunk as to shoot at a horse, cow or sheep by mistake for a deer shall foot the bill at the first dramshop and have his grog stopped for six months.

14. Any member who is guilty of contributing for distant charitable purposes when his charity is needed at home shall forfeit two gallons.

15. Any member who shall discover an individual of our opposers or enemies driving or keeping a hound hid in his barn or still hunting under a pretense of amusement or necessity, shall receive a premium of five gallons and two plugs of tobacco, to be paid by the treasurer out of any liquor or tobacco not otherwise appropriated.

16. Any member who shall play a game of cards without a stake of tobacco shall pay for the benefit of the club not more than one plug nor less than one chew, at the option of the president.

To the above rules and regulations we pledge ourselves, our lives, our fortunes and our skill in shooting.

A CAHOKIA MURDER.

The Victim of Sunday Night's Shooting Affray Dies.

The shooting affray which took place near Peter Godin's saloon, in Cahokia, last Sunday evening, terminated fatally, Alex. Perio, the victim of the fatal bullet, breathing his last about two o'clock this morning. The quarrel which led to Perio's death arose over an act of uncleanliness which Parras committed in a room occupied by himself and Louis Perio. Baptiste Naddua and Peter Godin, in company with the two parties to the quarrel, were sitting outside of Godin's saloon. Parras went into the house, and, after his return, Perio visited the room just left by Parras. The condition of the floor aroused his indignation and he upbraided Parras for his uncleanliness before the whole company. Strong language was used on both sides, which terminated in a scuffle. Godin and Naddua separated the belligerents, and all seemed settled, Parras going into the house. He returned and the quarrel was renewed, and as before terminated in a wrestling match. Parras was thrown heavily to the ground, with Perio pummeling his head and face. Two shots in succession immediately followed and Perio rolled over, exclaiming: "I am shot!" He was taken to his father's house, close by, and a physician summoned. Both balls lodged in the abdomen, either of which would produce death. Parras lounged around the neighborhood until yesterday noon, when he suddenly disappeared. Perio suffered the most excruciating pain from his injuries, and at times fairly screamed with agony. No attempt had been made by the authorities of Cahokia to arrest the murderer till he escaped. Parras is described as being about 5 feet 7 inches high, very dark complexion, lame in one leg and about 35 years of age. The authorities here traced him as far as the ferry, and think he is at present in St. Louis. Coroner Bader will hold an inquest this evening.

The School Board started on a tour of inspection to the school-houses this morning for the purpose of ordering necessary repairs. Most of the schools are in such a dilapidated condition that new school-houses would be much more acceptable to the people than a partial overhauling.

Constable Robt. Stack died at his residence, on Collinsville avenue, about 3 o'clock this morning. Mr. Stack has been ailing for the last year or more, but has attended to business at intervals till a few days ago. His funeral will take place to-morrow. He will be buried in Calvary Cemetery, St. Louis.

The School Board held a meeting in the little back room of the Herald office, yesterday evening, and the publisher of the Herald states that, judging from the immense uproar created in that back room, the business transacted must have been enormous. A large crowd of people assembled around the building, and it required the greatest efforts of the board to convince the people that the building was not on fire.

A crowd of young hoodlums who make Illinois and Collinsville avenues their headquarters are acquiring a notoriety for the successful manner in which they make it disagreeable for pedestrians. Last night they visited George Phoene's saloon, and after taking several drinks invited the barkeeper outside to try and compel them to pay. The barkeeper refused to accept the invitation, and the gang, just for amusement, attacked an unfortunate negro that happened along as they emerged from the saloon, and pummeled and kicked him till he was tired of yelling for help. Another one of their favorite pastimes is insulting females who pass in their immediate vicinity.

The weather indications for to-day are: For the Missouri Valley—Slightly warmer partly cloudy weather in the north portion, occasional rain, winds mostly southerly, stationary or lower pressure.

THE GEM CITY.

Off for St. Paul and the Northern Lakes.

The Gem City arrived at this port this afternoon, and at a few moments past 4 o'clock started northward again. She is the fastest running steamer on the Upper Mississippi, and is always well filled with passengers whether the trip be up or down the river. The Northern retreats seem still to be inviting, and many from St. Louis will still visit them this season. Among the many who took passage on the Gem City to-day were:

L. X. Lee, H. T. Hoppius, T. V. L. Brokau, J. E. Henderson, R. O. Osborne, H. C. Brakefield, C. A. Dearing, J. M. Rogers, H. Bohm, W. L. Gupton, Mrs. H. Brownwell and daughter, Mr. C. Dunn and wife, Miss Gould, Mr. C. Douglass, Mr. G. W. Doise and wife, David Gore and wife, Miss E. Henderson, B. H. Hauschulte, wife and child, H. H. Wernse and wife, A. M. Hutchinson, John Dotts, Frank Hinkson, W. L. Campbell, Walter Alexander, William Peters, Victor Burch, Dr. J. N. Vogt, Mr. H. H. Vogt, Q. L. Hall ane wife, Mrs. R. I. Henderson and two children, L. E. Morey and family, E. M. Torrance and family, Mrs. R. M. Liqnor and children, Mrs. W. G. Bentley and daughter, N. B. Hatcher and family.

A SINGLE bottle of St. Jacobs Oil contains more remedial virtue than a whole drug store.

NORTH ST. LOUIS ITEMS.

Maj. Harry Harmon returned this morning from a trip through the southern counties of Missouri.

A large force of men were put to work yesterday cleaning the receiving and settling basins of the Water-works.

Aude & Bros., Thirteenth and Cass avenue, are to at once rebuild their furniture factory that was destroyed by fire last night.

Charles Steile, who tried to shoot his wife on Broadway and Hempstead street last night, and then escaped, has not yet been arrested.

Stephen Girard Council, American Legion of Honor, is making extensive arrangements for its annual picnic to be given August 24, at Bodemann's Grove.

Henry Weiners, a driver of a lumber wagon, was thrown from his wagon this morning on Second and Winters streets, but escaped with a badly bruised back.

Prof. Wm. Strahl, of 1312 Montgomery street, suffered serious loss last evening. While the fire was raging in the rear of his premises a section of hose which lay on the side walk fronting his house suddenly burst, causing a deluge of water to enter his front window, and before its destruction could be stayed by the Professor, who was engaged in saving the bed clothes, and furniture of his neighbors, caused the ruin of much valuable sheet music as well as four or five musical instruments, including a valuable piano. Lawyer Warmhoff with several friends was first to notice the disaster and turned the hose into the street. The loss will foot up $800, on which there is no insurance carried.

Holman's PAD.

Acts by Absorption Through the Nerve Forces and the Circulation.

DR. HOLMAN'S PAD is the ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE CURATIVE PAD, the only remedy that has an honestly acquired right to use the title word "PAD" in connection with a treatment for chronic diseases of the STOMACH, LIVER, SPLEEN and MALARIAL BLOOD POISONING.

HOLMAN'S PAD has such complete control over the most persistent CHRONIC DISEASES of the STOMACH and LIVER, including INDIGESTION, all forms of DYSPEPSIA, BILIOUS and SICK HEADACHES, NERVOUS PROSTRATION and SLEEPLESSNESS, as to AMPLY justify the eminent Professor Loomis' high encomium: "IT IS NEARER A UNIVERSAL PANACEA THAN ANYTHING IN MEDICINE."

BEWARE OF BOGUS AND IMITATION PADS. EACH GENUINE HOLMAN PAD bears the PRIVATE REVENUE STAMP of the HOLMAN PAD COMPANY, being the above Trade Mark printed in green.
